This week in CBG

On the cover: Here There Be Dragons

Dragons have been a mainstay of fantasy stories for many years and they've been in comics, even becoming part of some conventions. We have stories about Leave it to Chance, Savage Dragon, Bone, Pocket Dragon Adventures, LegendLore, and Dragon Con this week.

Coverage throughout the issue

'Spinworld' spans Brent Anderson's career

The artist of Kurt Busiek's Astro City has worked on his own project for almost 20 years.

Editorial

By Maggie Thompson

➠ As I wrap up preparations for a week at Pro/Con, the ensuing Oakland Wonder-Con, and a trip to Dark Horse, I look for any advantages there may be to having my left foot in a cast while I attempt convention-going. I've actually come up with a few:

• When they announce preboarding for those "who may need extra time in boarding," I'll get to clomp on the plane early.

• Instead of puffing through the airport from one concourse to another, toting carry-ons, I'll get to ride in a wheelchair. Heck, if the flight is much delayed, I'll get to ride in one of those beeping conveyances.

• Finally (and this one just occurred to me, as I pulled out my suitcases), I need to take only the right shoe from each pair — and no high heels at all.

I'm sure there will be other tricks to such travel. On the other hand, I fervently hope I won't need to use them once I've learned them. The cast is supposed to come off a week or two — or three — after my return.

➠ I'm also looking forward (and this time, I'm serious) to getting together with Dick Lupoff, who'll sign copies of All in Color for a Dime with me at the booth. It'll be the only time this year that we'll be attending the same convention, and I'll be intrigued to see what attendee response may be to the book so many people have asked to have reprinted.

It has additional material: corrected art; an added introduction by Dick and me — which means I can legitimately sign copies (although I typed most of the manuscript on the original volume, I didn't write a chapter); and an index (which I'm already finding handy). So even if you have a copy of the original, I hope you'll consider taking a look at the new edition.

➠ As I prepared material for a discussion at Pro/Con, I looked at the twin questions "How did the industry get where it is today?" and "What is today's situation?"

The comics-shop market became important in 1975 by providing a base of preordered circulation for the comics publisher. The market was built to solve the problems of comics fans who couldn't easily find material that was being published. Intriguingly, that's still true — but for different reasons. It was also built on the idea that consumers read almost everything they bought. That's becoming true again, but market gyrations in the early '80s and '90s twisted consumer habits almost unrecognizably in ways that caused financial chaos for many.

Today, the consumer base is as large as it was in 1990, though the retailer may be making less from comics in his shop than he or she makes from other products — noticeably gaming items — and he or she is probably buying from only one distributor. This leads to some great conveniences and some great problems for everyone in the chain.

Customers are often confused over what's available and may read as many as 10 consumer publications. Publishers are competing with 300 other publishers per year, and an individual issue is competing with as few as 400 to as many as 600 other titles per month. Creators whose work is published by a big player in the field may even compete for attention with fellow creators working for that same company.

And anyone writing in depth about the field must constantly filter information on current news and comics with similar information on the past 64 years of comic-book publication. It can be hard for the wombat to get noticed, if it's displayed next to the peacock and the elephant.

Eisner nominees announced

'Astro City,' 'Kingdom Come' nominations reflect retro trend

Retro super-heroes were the wave of 1996, as reflected in this year's nominations for the Will Eisner Comics Industry Awards, the Oscars of comics. The nominees, in 29 categories, were chosen in early April by a blue-ribbon panel of judges, who went through thousands of publications submitted by publishers and creators.

Kurt Busiek's Astro City came up with the most nominations, showing up in the categories of Best Short Story ("The Nearness of You," KBAC #1/2), Best Seralized Story (KBAC vol. 2 #2-3), and Best Single Issue (KBAC vol. 2 #1), as well as Best Continuing Series, Best Writer (Busiek), Best Penciller/Inker Team (Brent Anderson/Will Blyberg), Best Cover Artist (Alex Ross), and Best Graphic Album — Reprint (KBAC: Life in the Big City).

Another retro series that did well was DC's Kingdom Come, which garnered nominations for Best Limited Series, Best Writer (Mark Waid), Best Painter (Alex Ross), Best Cover Artist (Ross), Best Letterer (Todd Klein), Best Editor (Dan Raspler), and Best Comics-Related Item (the trading-card set painted by Ross).

One of this year's Eisner judges, Joe Field, owner of Flying Colors Comics and Other Cool Stuff, said, "The strength of the nominees in every category shows that the art form of comics is more vital than ever, with an amazing variety of material from every corner of the comics field. I encourage readers to sample the work of all the nominees to really discover the diversity this wonderful medium offers."

Eisner judge and Diamond Comic Distributors Customer Service Representative Jesse Leon McCann said, "I was impressed with the diversity all the judges brought to the Eisner table and the system in place by Awards Administrator Jackie Estrada to ensure that each publisher's contenders received fair consideration without bias. Those who were nominated represent the results of hours of study and debate."

Perhaps the most unusual nomination is for "M.M. Carwald" in the Best Editor category: Mike Carlin and the late Mark Gruenwald's pseudonym as overseeing editors of last year's Amalgam comics.

Other judges on the nominating panel included Janet Hetherington (writer-artist of the upcoming Eternal Romance comic book, Tony Isabella (comics writer and CBG columnist), and Paul Grant (CompuServe comics forum administrator and programming director for Motor City Comic Con and the Chicago Comicon). Grant said, "The intensive reading sessions, the critical appraisal discussions, and the actual voting process was some of the hardest work I've ever done for any hobby, but I had more fun doing it than probably should be legal. All of the judges took their task seriously, without taking themselves too seriously, which made for an easygoing atmosphere, despite our occasional vast differences of opinion."

Isabella said, "I'm amazed at my good fortune in being asked to be an Eisner judge in a year when there were so many outstanding submissions. It made for difficult choices in every category. But, when the voting was over, I felt we had done a good job. On a personal level, I was introduced to several new (to me) creators whose work I will follow in the future."

Eisner Award ballots have gone out to some 5000 comics creators, editors, publishers, retailers, and distributors. The votes will be tabulated by Mel Thompson and Associates, and the results will be announced at the Eisner awards ceremony held at the Hyatt Regency Hotel in San Diego the evening of July 18. Will Eisner will be on hand to congratulate all the winners, and Frank Miller will give the keynote speech.

Hetherington said, "I was pleased to find that despite a general perception that comics are in decline, more authors than ever are choosing the comics medium to express themselves and create works of enduring quality. After the long, intensive work-weekend, I came away satisfied with the wide range of great material — superhero, alternative, indy comics, and more — represented on this year's ballot."

The Eisners are administered under the auspices of San Diego Comic Convention, Inc. Principal sponsors for 1997 include Brenner Printing, Diamond Comic Distributors, and Quebecor Printing. Supporting sponsors include Atlantis Fantasy World, Flying Colors, and Star*Reach Productions.

"When Blackhawk Wasn't," an analytical cover story in the Feb. 20 New Haven, Conn., Advocate surveyed black characters in comic books and paused to remember a day when Lois Lane was.

The story in the weekly newspaper of the arts was inspired by a February exhibit called "The Changing Image of African-Americans in Comics: 1890s-1990s" at the New Haven Free Public Library. The exhibit, which was put together from the collection of Professor William Foster, was used to trace black representations in comics from racist stereotypes to invisibility to gradual recognition.

Advocate writer Khalid Lum took a personal approach to the feature, remembering lessons he'd learned from pop culture as a black youth in the '50s and '60s: "that black people in Africa waited for thousands of years for Tarzan to come along so somebody could talk to the damn animals, that, wherever Metropolis and Gotham City were located, thar warn't Negro the First livin' there."

The exhibit covered a broad range of images from mildly stereotyped secondary characters in The Yellow Kid to the constantly shifting complexion of The X-Men's Storm. "Mostly she looks white," said Lum. "Sometimes she looks white with the suggestion of a tan. Sometimes the tan is pretty decently dark."

The collection also included attempts at positive images from such '40s and early '50s titles as Negro Heroes, All-Negro Comics, and Negro Romance, as well the emergence of prominent black characters and racial issues in the comics of the late '60s.

Foster's experiences as a black comics fan inspired him to assemble the collection. "I'm not doing this to sell these things for a profit," he said. "I'm doing it because I love comics, and I believe the history of the black images portrayed in American comics is an important part of our history."

One of Foster's favorite camp images comes from Superman's Girlfriend Lois Lane #106, in which Lois dresses in a funky outfit and has herself turned black for 24 hours.

Green Lantern wakes up to issues of color in this famous scene from Green Lantern #76 (1970).

A sidebar by Hank Hoffman focused on stories in EC comics from the 1950s which dealt critically with racism in America, including the science-fiction parable "Judgment Day" from Weird Fantasy #18 and "In Gratitude," about a black war hero denied burial in a white cemetery from Shock SuspenStories #11.

Ironically, Fredric Wertham's crusade against violent, sexual, and racist images in comics in the 1950s ultimately led to the cancellation of virtually all of EC's comic books.

In the article's conclusion, Lum looked ahead to the upcoming live-action movie and animated HBO series built around Spawn, projects which may result in the most high-profile African-American comics character since Marvel's Black Panther became the first black super-hero 30 years ago.

CBG contributor Shel Dorf has launched a self-syndicated daily and Sunday comic strip called Family Popcorn with artist Tom Reese. The strip features characters commenting on movies.

An item in the Feb. 15 Editor and Publisher reported Fiftysomething News in California is one of the publications carrying the strip.

Dorf's previous strip experience includes working with Milton Caniff on Steve Canyon.

PRESERVATION and STORAGE PRODUCTS by GERBER

Buy From THE SOURCE, 'The One-Stop Shop'

Why Are Our Prices so Low?

1. We invented the first Mylar® sealed sleeves in 1979.
2. Our 1985 patent is used by all our competitors.
3. Our patented equipment is sold and used world-wide, including two machines purchased by the Library of Congress.
4. We build all our own equipment. We do not buy from others. We keep the highest producing machines for ourselves & sell the rest.
5. We have patents or patents pending on many of our unique products.
6. Most importantly, our business logic is NOT to sell as high as the traffic will bear; but as low as possible to make our products available to more collectors. We take our Company Slogan seriously.

The New Batman and Superman Adventures

Just a quick note to clear up the misconception that the Batman animated series is going live-action '60s-show camp when it debuts on the Kids WB! this fall. Nope. No. Never. Nuh-uh. No way. Though Bruce Timm has revamped the look of the characters (to streamline them even further, à la Superman, and also visually distance the new episodes from the reruns on Fox), the series itself has not been given a Saturday-morning cartoon-cute makeover.

Gotham City is still scary, Batman's still the grim, driven hero, and we are still going to do the same dark, quirky, off-beat, sometimes funny, sometimes tragic character-driven Batman stories for which the series is famous.

See you in September.

I have been collecting comics since about 1972 and reading — or rather, looking at them — probably since 1965. While this list is by no means exhaustive, I hope to use the forum of Oh, So? to thank the following individuals associated with comics:

Jim Aparo: for a Batman I believe would strike fear in the hearts of criminals and the definitive versions of The Spectre and Phantom Stranger.

Mike Kaluta: for one of the two names I associate with The Shadow (the other is Orson Welles).

P. Craig Russell and Barry Windsor-Smith: for some of the most spectacular art to grace this field in the last 20-some years.

Kurt Busiek, Alex Ross, and Mark Waid: for remembering what it's all about.

Jeff Smith and Paul Chadwick: for being such nice guys.

Dave Sim and Harlan Ellison: for being such curmudgeons.

Alan Moore and Neil Gaiman: for transcending the medium and producing bodies of work for an audience searching for depth.

Peter David: for making us laugh and think.

Craig Shutt, Mark Evanier, and Ron Goulart: for keeping history alive.

Maggie Thompson, Alan Light, and all the rest who helped establish fandom.

Jim Steranko and Neal Adams: for true art in this medium.

Gary Reed, Larry Marder, and Denis Kitchen: for diversity and quality.

Bill Morrison and Amanda Conner: for gratis sketches of Bart and Barbie, respectively, for my daughter Valerie.

Carl Barks and Don Rosa: for being the Good Artist and the heir apparent.

Dan DeCarlo: for being to Archie what Barks is to Ducks.

Joe Kubert: for The Hawkman, The Army Man, and The Ape-Man and Fax from Sarajevo, your finest professional achievement.

Colleen Doran, Teri S. Wood, and Wendy Pini: for plugging away at quality, personal visions and proving that there's plenty of talented women in the industry.

Stan Lee, Julie Schwartz, Murphy Anderson, and Gil Kane: for the precious metal of the Silver Age.

The Amalgam Universe

Having learned of the recent death of William Schallert, I found myself remembering the many and varied roles he played in his long and prolific career, from comedies like The Man from S.M.A.R.T. to dramas such as The Outer Zone. But I wonder how many people will recall Retired Man, an amusing role he played in a duo of comedy specials called Legends of the Amalgam Heroes.

Most who remember these shows tend to cringe when they do, and, indeed, in his autobiography Back to the Barrow Adam West dismissed it as "terrible," saying further that "It hurts to think about it." It is, nonetheless, a piece of comics history and it is not without its good points. For those who doubt, and for those who have never seen Legends, I will give a brief rundown.

Legends of the Amalgam Heroes was broadcast on NBC in the late '70s (or early '80s; in any case, some years before the Secret Crisis and well before all this grim-and-gritty stuff). Adam West and Yvonne Craig, both still fighting fit, returned as Dark Claw and Sparrow, while the not-yet-late, but always great, Victor Buono reminded viewers why the Big Question was the best-loved Dark Claw villain of the 1960s (with the possible exception of Frank Gorshin as Chronos-Tut).

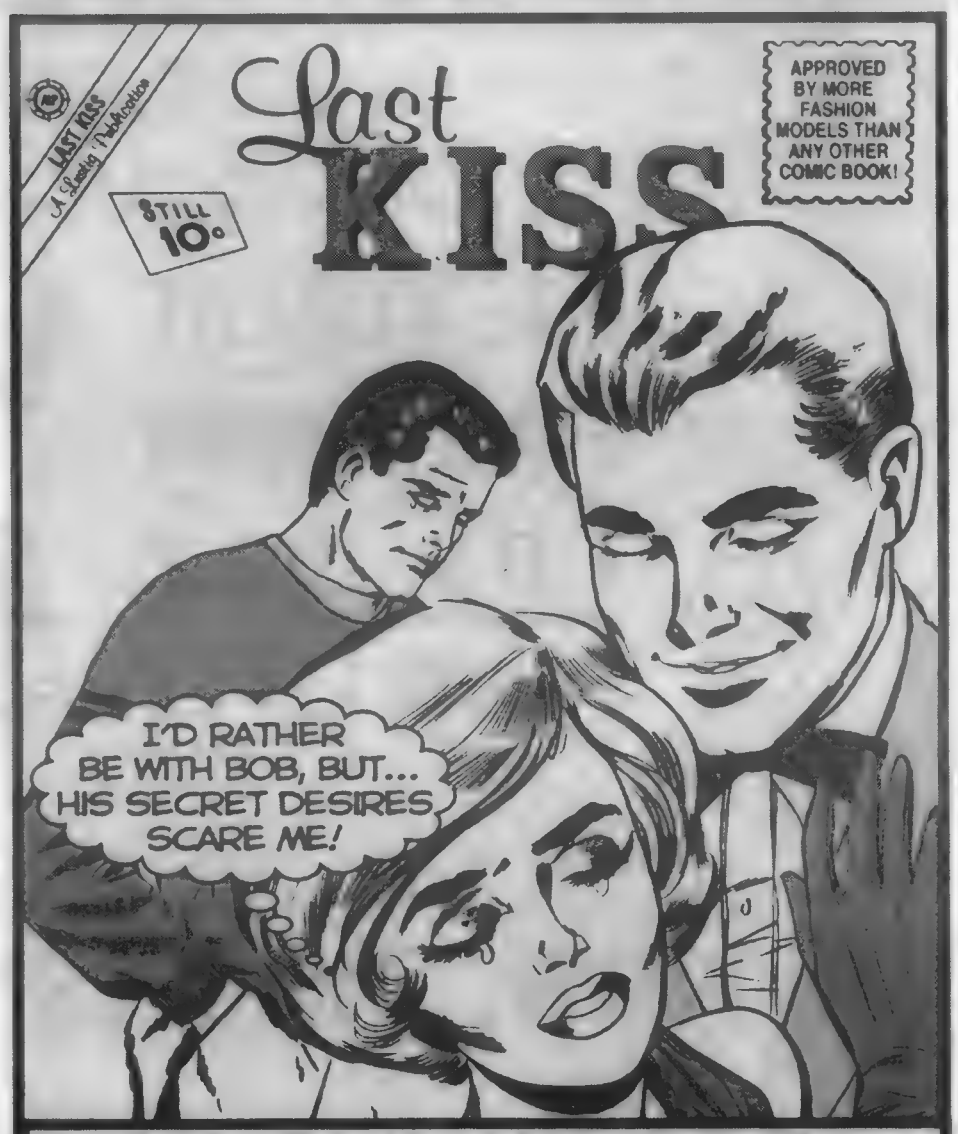
The other heroes portrayed on the show were Captain Marvel (Garrett Craig), Iron Lantern (Howard Murphy), Angelhawk (Bill Nuckols), Huntress (Barbara Joyce), Speed Demon (Rod Haase), and Canary (Danuta). Missing were Amazon, who still had her own CBS-TV series starring Pam Grier (with Lynda Carter as Freelance), and Super-Soldier, who had just flown onto the big screen in the person of Christopher Reeve.

The show followed the '60s Dark Claw pattern, with the heroes playing it straight (save for one or two funny bits) with a gung-ho attitude, while the real yuks were provided by the villains, most of whom were played with great gusto by some of the top names in comedy. Gabe Dell (who also left us not long ago) led the forces of evil as Baron Mordro, aided and abetted by Charlie Callas as Mandarinestro, Howard Morris as Dr. Thaddaeus Bodog Thinker, and Jeff Altman as Whirlwind Wizard. Rounding out the roster of rogues were A'lesha Brevard as Colossia (a villain who was a regular on the Superamalgamated Friends cartoon series, but who to date has not yet been seen in the comics) and Mickey Morton as Skulk (obviously before Dr. Strangefate took him under his wing).

The show's production values were not the greatest; the "armor" worn by Iron Lantern and Whirlwind Wizard was made of buckram and looked it (actually, Iron Lantern came off looking rather like a green-and-gold version of the Japanese super-hero Ultraspectreman), and Speed Demon's glowing eyes were a less-than-frightening CSO effect. On the plus side, the makeup used on Mordro, Colossia, and especially Skulk was very good, while Angelhawk's heavily muscled physique made up for his stiff and occasionally crooked wings.

TOO-REAL-TO-BE TRUE ROMANCES! DIALOGUE BY JOHN LUSTIG



COPYRIGHT © JOHN LUSTIG , 1997

And if the viewer kept an open mind, the show's hi-jinks were really enjoyable. For example, in the first episode, "The Challenge" — which involved the heroes trying to stop the villains from setting off a doomsday (no relation to the Doctor) device — Mandarinestro tries to throw Iron Lantern off the trail by disguising himself as an old (female) Chinese fortune teller, Big Question does the same to Captain Marvel in the person of an oversized Sigmund Freud who pops out of nowhere (office, couch, and all) in an open field, and Whirlwind Wizard, as a used-car dealer, palms off a deathtrap of a motorcycle on Dark Claw and Sparrow (since in an earlier scene, Skulk — masquerading as an auto mechanic — has trashed the Clawmobile).

Nonetheless, this vehicle (or at least, bits of it) gets the Dynamic Duo past a lemonade stand from which Dr. Thinker (disguised as a little boy) has sold a power-sapping beverage to each of the heroes as they passed. Undaunted, all the heroes make their way to the villains' island base by any means necessary; I still crack up when I recall the sight of Marvel rowing a boat across the lake, as Iron Lantern stands in the prow and orders, "Stroke! Stroke!" Meanwhile, due to Skulk's stupidity, the villains have drunk a toast to their scheme — with the rest of Thinker's formula.

The heroes arrive and the inevitable fight ensues. Canary flattens Colossia, Mandarinestro vainly tries to punch out Iron Lantern and only fractures his knuckles, and Angelhawk and Sparrow double-team Whirlwind Wizard, while, in the confusion, Speed Demon nearly wallops Captain Marvel.

Dark Claw intimidates Big Question into revealing where the doomsday device is — right over their heads, in fact — and, when Huntress has caught Dr. Thinker, Dark Claw and Marvel hoist him up and hit the "off" switch with his head. Angelhawk pummels Mordro, and all the villains are carted away — with the exception of Big Question, whom Dark Claw leads away in Clawcuffs.

Then we see, as the caption tells us, "The Villains' Hideout ... Hours Later." It is at this point that Retired Man — introduced at the top of the program — scuttles in, declaring, "I'm here ... to save the world!" He reaches for the "off" switch, sees it's already off, mutters, "Oh, heck," and falls asleep.

The second edition was called "The Roast" and Jack Paar's sidekick, Johnny Carson, plays host and pays tribute to the heroes, along with the villains (including Ruth Buzzi as the outrageous Aunt Minerva-May), other super-heroes (including Alfie Wise as Atom Antman — who was newly engaged to Colossia!), and Angelhawk's mother, played by the hilarious Pat Carroll. Retired Man is there to share, but somehow never quite finish, stories of his early adventures.

True to roast etiquette, the heroes take the barbs and jokes and even Whirlwind Wizard's indoor hurricane (after which, incidentally, Angelhawk can be seen bareheaded, holding his helmet) in stride, not reacting with the slightest bit of bad humor or temper. That is, until Baron Mordro, singing his own version of "That's Entertainment" ("A flood turning cities to mud/Or a blaze that keeps burning for days/Or a quake even Richter can't take/That's entertainment!") lays waste to the Hall of Heroes with his eldritch lightning bolts, prompting a decisive move from Dark Claw — who hits him in the face with a pie.

Yes, the two installments of Legends of the Amalgam Heroes were corny, they were silly, the special effects made the Challengers of the Fantastic movie look like Stargate of the Jedi, and, yes, they were also loads of fun. Of all the roles played by the late, great William Schallert, I shall always remember him as The Scarlet Cyclone (as Retired Man preferred to be known).

This is not a letter I relish writing but one that, in the interest of fairness, I needed to write. In my last letter to Oh, So?, I was commenting on Peter David's supposed Star Wars loophole. David hypothesized that, once Princess Leia received the stolen plans to the original Death Star, she should have immediately put the plans out on the Intergalactic Internet. I wrote you with a host of rationalizations as to why she didn't, none of which, as it turns out, were correct. Kudos to John Jackson Miller and his Faraway Looks column (CBG #1221) for hitting the nail on the head.

There is still room for debate, though. Yes, the moment after Leia's ship received the beamed transmissions, the Tantive IV went into hyperspace. We can only assume (and I know we shouldn't assume anything, especially in a space opera) that she didn't attempt to duplicate or broadcast the Death Star plans while in hyperspace because she couldn't. In fact, Brian Daley's Star Wars radio drama (episode #3) doesn't account for the time the Tantive IV was in hyperspace between Toprawa and Tatooine. Once they make the reversion to normal space, the Star Destroyer Devastator is right on their tail, courtesy of a tracing device smuggled aboard by a traitor. At this point, Princess Leia couldn't broadcast the Death Star plans, because the Imperials were jamming their transmissions. Leia also probably didn't have enough time to make multiple copies of the stolen plans and distribute them to the crew. Not that that would have done any good anyway, since the Empire was blasting any escape pods carrying life forms.

I don't know why Leia couldn't broadcast the plans while traveling faster than light. Hyperspace must preclude such transmissions, but I'll leave it to the Lucasfilm braintrust to determine whether one can broadcast from hyperspace. It would seem that the Princess is at least guilty of poor planning, even if one cannot get on the Internet while in hyperspace. Remember, she didn't know her ship was being followed, and one would think that the Rebels should have suspected that the Empire might accost them above Tatooine.

The only other item that caught my attention concerning this was that Leia's ship enters hyperspace before they have a destination set. It's after they have made their faster-than-light escape that Leia tells Antilles to set a course for Tatooine. Is this, within the framework of the Star Wars rules, possible? I thought that without precise calculations you might bounce too close to a star or whatever and be destroyed.

I know I'm probably getting a bit anal about the whole thing, but what would you expect from a Star Wars fanzine publisher? Thanks again for the time and space.

the time and space.

Clare Kierstead
107 MacBurnie Rd.
Caribou, ME 04736

I can smell it in the air. It's subtle, almost imperceptible. But it's there. And it's a sweet smell, though not sickeningly so — just sweet and sultry enough to cause my heart beat to quicken, my palms to perspire, and my breath to heat. It's a smell that causes me to turn to the object of my desire, as my chest begins to heave and a deafening pounding sound builds in my ears. (Jeez, somebody open a window!)

What am I talking about? I'm talking about the sweet signs of a comics industry beginning to recover. They're almost undiscernable at times but they are definitely there, and this causes me to start to shake with anticipation.

What are the signs? Creators, publishers, and, yes, even the fans are beginning to talk about solutions and ceasing wasting time blaming each other. I see several companies offering lower-priced comics. I see titles selling through and I don't mean 30 copies going to three speculators — I mean 30 copies going to 30 readers. I see articles like Peter David's But I Digress in CBG #1215, where he talks about how impressed he was, at a recent creators' brainstorming session, with their enthusiasm for the characters and universe and their absolute passion and dedication to come up with the best storyline possible.

Then, of course, there is the very best sign of all — great stories! Holy mackerel, comics lovers, what a great time to be in comics.

It doesn't matter what genre you like or whether you're a fan of a particular company, the stories are there all over the place: Bone, Pattycake, Preacher, Stray Bullets, Strangers in Paradise, Hitmen, Astro City, Ash, Hilly Rose, Azrael, Starman (if you like Sandman, give this a ride) Spectre, Dawn, Uncle Scrooge, Witchblade, Darkchylde, The Darkness, Gen¹³, Star Wars, Ghost in the Shell, Akira, Supreme, Coventry, Spawn, Incredible Hulk, Pakkins' Land, Hoon, THB, Leave It to Chance, and the list goes on.

Yes, there still are bad comics out there and probably there always will be some. But we're definitely on our way back to the top. We still have nauseating fads in the industry, but we, the fans, can weed 'em out by not trading our greenbacks for the tripe. I'll point to the nude variants as example. There's only one reason these exist and sell, and all of us know what that is. But what's really sad is these usually have inflated prices attached (usually $9.95), which causes some to spend $10 for that one comic book instead of picking up three to 10 quality comics for 99¢ to whatever.

But we, the buying fans, are in control of what's on the shelf. Don't buy the crud. It's easy enough to spot anything which doesn't promote story quality above everything else and is a good candidate for zip city. But the good news is I'm seeing fewer and fewer gimmicks and more and more quality reading material. This is what comics are all about.

Once you find a good title, make sure you tell everyone you know! For instance, the first time I read Pattycake, the very first thing I did (after I picked myself up off the floor, where I'd collapsed from laughing myself silly) was to tell everyone I knew (even non-comics readers) about it. I also wrote several letters to Scott Roberts, the creator, who also has Pattycake featured in CBG's And Now segment (Did you enjoy these? If so, get his comics), and let him know of my support. I ordered extra copies to show and, as a direct result, a non-comics-reader friend of mine now has a subscription to both Pattycake and Bone.

Oh, and while I'm talkingabout Pattycake, I want to urge everyone strongly to try out all of Caliber's new Tapestry line, which is a for-all-ages category. Pattycake is one of the offerings, along with Pakkin's Land (C.S. Lewis fans will love this!), Shades of Gray, Terror Tots, and Trollords, among others. It's so nice to have quality reading which you can offer to all ages without having to worry about content. I guess that's what I love about Bone so much, too.

Can you tell I'm excited? Well, I am. Things are definitely looking up. Those friends of yours who used to read comics but stopped a few years back: Let 'em know. Grab a copy of a favorite of yours and share it with them. Let them know what a great time it is to be reading comics!

Sean M. Meiers

As I was reading issue #1214, several seemingly different areas of the comics industry came together for me, namely: Dan T's Inferno, the guest editorial, the "heroes redone" trend in the industry, recent Point of View columns, and On Top of the Trends in issue #1212. (Side Note #1: I received #1212, 1213, and 1214 over a two-day stretch and #1215 and 1216 five days later — one of the many joys of being stationed overseas.)

What this has brought to mind is that we have lost and/or ignored our history. This is the problem I have with Marvel's Heroes Reborn project. Maybe those titles were not doing well, as Tom Conolly mentioned in his letter (issue #1214), but why wipe the slate clean when you take over the title? (Side Note #2: I was collecting both Avengers and Captain America until Heroes Reborn started. And the rising sales of the Waid-Garney Captain America proves my point. Without erasing what had gone on before, they were able to improve the commercial success of the title.)

The beauty of comics is that the characters span generations. It's similar to George Will's comment about the beauty of baseball: The stats that are kept on the players allow fathers, mothers, sons, daughters, and even grandparents to argue who is the best player at what position. A sense of history is what binds us together as a community. When our kids read comics with the same characters that we read as kids, it brings us closer together; it lets us compare and contrast and, ultimately, communicate.

Wiping the slate clean has two effects. The first is the alienation of many current readers of the title (e.g., Spider-Man and Green Lantern). I understand and often enjoy it when a new creative team shakes a title's status quo. While not everyone appreciates every change, stagnation is just as deadly to a character as change. However, there is a huge difference between cosmetic

CORTO MALTESE: BALLAD OF THE SALT SEA #2
Hugo Pratt

The comic book serialisation of this first epic adventure which introduced the legendary character continues. The scene has been set: we're on the high seas near Papua before the first world war on the pirate Rasputin's boat picking up first the young Pandora and Cain, then the shipwrecked Corto Maltese. Rasputin enlicits Corto's help in commandeering a freighter of coal to sell to the Germans for gold. Then a cyclone strikes and scatters our characters all over an island! This next action-packed episode sees many twists as Corto does his best to keep Pandora and Cain alive against Rasputin's more cynical wishes...

ORIENT GATEWAY
Vittorio Giardino

Originally published by Catalan and long out of print, this classic thriller by Vittorio (Little Ego, Prague) Giardino is now available again! Summer 1938. Europe is teetering on the brink. Hitler builds his armies. Stalin unleashes a savage purge. In the far corners of the world, the intelligence agencies of the major powers fall into a frenzy of relentless warring. One Mr. Stern, an engineer, becomes the stakes in this shadowy conflict. Chased by Stalin's spies, Stern takes refuge in Istanbul. In this cosmopolitan city, Max Friedman and the intoxicating Magda Witnitz will do everything to save him.

The sexually free '70s. Young, beautiful Marta goes for a vacation to be with her friend on her isolated beach house. the warm sun, lazy beach breezes and sensuous group of friends slowly but surely take over the senses. In such surroundings, clothes become useless and lustful desires flow naturally...Marta lets herself go with her very explorative companions like she had never done before. Done pseudonymously by an established comic artist, this is a sensuous, sensitively written increasingly breathless descent into sheer carnality like only such a warm private beach setting could possibly bring about. A very real fantasy that could very well happen to any one of us.

Oh, So?

surgery and amputation. (Aquaman being an exception. But I digress.) History is what gives a character character. When that history is disregarded, you no longer have the same character. Every character has certain elements that make him or her special and different from every other character. The trend of wiping the slate clean is eliminating that from many characters.

Only Bruce Wayne can be Batman. No one else will ever have his obsessive commitment (which was the whole point of "Knightfall," et al.). His parents had to be killed when he was a boy; if that is changed, he no longer is Batman. Superman has to wear red and blue (the old costume will return) and be the Man of Steel. It is what defines him and separates him from everyone else. The current storyline will change Kal-El and affect how he sees and experiences life. It will become part of his history and part of his character and further emphasize why he is known as The Man of Steel. This is the difference between cosmetic surgery and amputation. If this change is permanent, it is amputation; if it is a way to further define who Superman is, it is cosmetic surgery and is what good storytelling is all about.

The second effect is a loss of interest in back issues. When a character's past is negated, there is less reason to collect back issues. Publishers may not believe that they have an interest in this, but that is a short-sighted outlook. Retailers need the back-issue interest to survive and thrive; without retailers, the publishers will have no marketplace in which to sell and promote their wares. Interest in back issues leads to interest in current issues, making for a healthier industry.

(Side Note #3: This also ties into the issue of price. When I was 15 years old, I bought back issues. Now that I'm 31 and have more money available — and am spending more on comics — I no longer do so, because all my funds are going toward keeping up with current issues, even though I'm not buying any more titles than before. I'm also not trying the occasional odd title that I don't normally collect, as I used to. It is the cost of current issues that will cause Cliff Biggers' predicted dearth of back issues in five to 10 years. Although this does open the possibility for reprint titles on the part of publishers. Hmm. Maybe they aren't being quite as idiotic on this as I first thought.)

Retaining history does require the reader to suspend belief a little (OK, a lot), but is accepting the fact that Bruce Wayne is still in his 30s — 50 years later — any different from believing that a man can fly? Fiction, by its very nature, requires the reader to engage in a suspension of belief, regardless of the medium in which it is presented. It is up to the storyteller to make that easy for the reader to do.

We are also ignoring history on the business end. Everyone wants to have things as they once were without recognizing the changes that have occurred. Years ago, when comics were selling in greater numbers, kids collected comics because they were inexpensive and available almost anywhere. As readers grew older and their tastes changed, comics started to evolve to meet their new demands. Comics were created that appealed to both the beginning collector and the older collector. However, the business continued to evolve, slowly moving more and more to the higher-end market which produced more money per issue. As this trend continued, we went from a business that catered to hobbyists to one that catered to moneymakers (speculators). This is why the comics industry recently imploded: Moneymakers left and there weren't enough hobbyists to pick up the slack.

What is missing are the introductory-level comics necessary to bring in new collectors. The comics now produced appeal to the mid-level to high-end collector: high-quality paper to showcase the art, specialty covers (not multiple covers), limited series, titles for niche markets (e.g., Sin City, Vertigo, Helix), etc.

The U.S. Postal Service produces introductory kits to get kids interested in collecting stamps, realizing that, while not every one of them will become collectors as an adult, some will (and they make a large profit on collectors who save stamps and never actually cash them in for use). They are working to ensure that there will always be a market for stamps. We have forgotten that the comics industry was started for and made successful by kids. Almost everyone today who collects comics, even if they no longer collect the mainstream super-hero comics, got started collecting comics as kids.

We are ignoring our comics history much to our own detriment.

One of your past Silver Age columns got me thinking about something: What is the collector's status of World's Finest #173?

The column to which I refer designated it as possibly the first Silver Age appearance of Two-Face. Is it? At a minimum, it appears to be the first Silver Age reintroduction of Two-Face, because Two-Face does not actually appear. Instead, Batman, for the entire story, becomes Two-Face through drinking some potion, and Robin explains to the reader who Two-Face was through a flashback, I believe. So what gives? Overstreet doesn't even list it as an appearance or reintroduction of Two-Face, but it is certainly something.

Can anyone help me understand this?

[One of the problems here may be the identification of the dates of the Silver Age itself. Since Two-Face was a Golden Age creation and the Batman comics appearances were uninterrupted between Golden and Silver Ages, a "last" Golden Age and "first" Silver Age appearance may be difficult to target.

We count the Silver Age as beginning with the appearance of The Flash in Showcase #4 (Sep-Oct 56), and Two-Face appeared, for example, in Batman #81 (Feb 54) in "Two-Face Strikes Again" — late for the Golden Age but maybe too early for the Silver Age. With Batman and Robin as ongoing characters, I'd hesitate to try to characterize a specific appearance in that era as belonging to Golden or Silver spans. With Batman, in fact, the eras were more clearly established within the series, with a break in story type when it became tied to the TV series and with another break when Batman's costume put the bat in the yellow circle on his chest.]

• What I Thought I Saw is a book collecting photos by Kelli Bickman. Its introduction by Neil Gaiman would make it of interest to comics collectors by itself, but many of the photos in this trade paperback (1996, 11:11 Studio, P.O. Box 208-kb, Old Chelsea Station, New York, NY 10113, black and white, $23.95, ISBN 1-889644-03-X) carry the added interest of having been shot during the recording of Gaiman's six-part BBC fantasy mini-series Neverwhere.

News of Neverwhere (and, for that matter, of Gaiman's terrific children's book which will be released shortly) will soon appear in CBG. In the meantime, the book contains photos of people and characters they play (sometimes under the name of the person, sometimes under the character name, sometimes with a play on words). Bickman says, "I am not much of a writer. I tend to see the world in pictures, textures, colors. Perhaps that is why I have surrounded myself with writers, people who can put words to images where I cannot."

Her photos are evocative and, sometimes, provocative. She shows full frontal nudity and full frontal costuming. Will the average comic-book reader like this book? Probably not. Are you an average comic-book reader? This is one you're really going to have to pick up and flip through in order to decide to buy it, especially considering its price. Unless, of course, you're a Gaiman completist.

• Coventry #2 (Mar 97, Fantagraphics, black and white, $3.95) is, like #1 which you've read so much about, by Bill Willingham. The opening of this issue is a grabber: "And lo, the angel of the Lord came unto me, forty minutes late for her nine o'clock appointment."

If you haven't tried Coventry by now, even this will probably not hook you, but Willingham continues to be inventive. And his cute little demon is anything but appealing, as Willingham begins to demonstrate the bad side of striking up a friendship with one. Coventry is not for kids, by the way.

• Raymond Chandler's Philip Marlowe: The Little Sister is apparently the title of the trade paperback illustrated by Michael Lark (1997, Fireside/Simon and Schuster, $15, ISBN 0-684-82933-9). The first Marlowe novel was The Big Sleep, published in 1939 and released (starring Bogart as Marlowe) in film form seven years later. The Little Sister itself was copyright 1949, but this version has the addition of a cover by Jim Steranko and a comic-book adaptation by Michael Lark. (Note to completists: This version was released in a 110-copy edition in 1995. You probably didn't get a copy.)

Noir is, per se, thought of as colorless — but Alex Wald's coloring is subtle and clear. It does not simply exist to make Marlowe's world somehow gaudy or pretty. Lark spots his blacks with skill, keeps his character depiction and architectural detail under control, and takes the reader through the grim, twisted paces of Chandler's story.

And twisted they are. (One of the deaths in The Big Sleep is classic, in that film students challenged to explain it cannot solve one of the murders — because the solution is never given.) People are not what they seem — while others are exactly what they seem. Who was where when? Lark provides Chandler's complex tale with clarity, illuminating the dark corners of the plot, the characters, and the locations.

TABLETALK

THE COMICS BUYER'S GUIDE TO GAMES

compiled by Brent Frankenhoff and John Jackson Miller

And the winners are:

The following people have won the Tabletalk contest prizes announced in CBG #1218. We'd like to thank Five Rings Publishing for supplying the Legends of the Five Rings starter decks and TSR for furnishing a copy of Fritz Leiber's Lankhmar: The New Adventures of Fafhrd and Gray Mouser. Contestants were permitted to send in one entry for each prize they desired. And the winners are:

Jerry Crow of Olmstead Falls, Ohio, wins the starter decks for the Crab, Dragon, and Unicorn clans.

Michael Henry of White Plains, N.Y., will receive the Naga clan starter deck.

David Kapp of Aurora, Colo., gets the Scorpion clan deck.

David W. Price of Albuquerque, N.M. wins Fritz Leiber's Lankhmar.

Robert W. Zailo of Ontario, Calif., wins the Lion Clan starter deck.

Thanks to everyone who participated, and to our winners, we hope you enjoy the games!

We start this week with a bittersweet update on a column of several weeks ago:

The night of Jan. 17, death came to a wonderful little movie house on Fairfax Avenue in Los Angeles. Founded in the '40s by the late John Hampton, The Silent Movie Theater had been a wonderful place to visit a time when films lacked speech and (usually) color but seemed somehow all the more glorious because of it. Many happy evenings were spent — by me and by many — viewing Hampton's bottomless collection of soundless treasures.

Then, upon his illness in the '80s, The Silent Movie Theater went dark. When Hampton passed away soon after, it appeared that his hall would become, like the films he showed, history. Happily, that was not the case. A film buff named Laurence Austin obtained the title from Hampton's widow. With the help of local movie fans and a projectionist named James Van Sickle, Austin reopened The Silent Movie Theater: a cause for celebration.

All celebration ceased that night last January. As the story was recounted here and in the press, Laurence Austin was killed in a penny-ante robbery. A man who'd bought a ticket had waited through a short comedy and then, when the feature commenced, slipped out into the lobby. Pulling out a gun, he confronted Austin, who was counting box-office receipts with a young woman who worked there as a cashier.

In my report here, I wrote:

Confronted with a demand for the cash, they handed it over, and then, for reasons we may never know, the gunman opened fire. Austin, shot in the face at point-blank range, was killed instantly. The employee, shot in the chest, was rushed to Cedars-Sinai hospital where, as I write this, her condition is listed as fair.

Today, the employee is well on her way to a full recovery — and we may know why the gunman opened fire.

The police, though they didn't say so at the time, apparently thought they knew right away. The gunman shot Austin, then he shot the cashier. Then, before he fled with the cash, he pumped several more shots into Austin's body. When investigators realized this was the sequence, they theorized that the robbery had been but a smoke screen, that the motive had been the deliberate, premeditated murder of Laurence Austin.

Makes sense. The only logical reason for a garden-variety burglar to have fired those parting shots would be to make doubly certain that the owner couldn't identify him. But the killer didn't bother to finish off the cashier, who was alive and screaming. He used precious time and bullets on a man who was almost certainly dead. Simple deduction: The killer wasn't concerned about being identified. His motive was just to kill Austin.

As it turned out, he should have worried about being identified. The cashier gave a description that, on March 9, led to the arrest of 21-year-old Christian Rodriguez. But the story does not end there.

Because the day before, police arrested James Leslie Van Sickle, the projectionist (and former business partner of Austin), charging him with arranging the killing. The two were each charged with one felony count of murder, one felony count of attempted murder and special circumstances, including murder for hire, lying in wait, and being armed with a deadly weapon in the act of a felony. If convicted, both men face the death penalty.

A few days later, police held a press conference, reported in The Hollywood Reporter and the Los Angeles Times. Detective Alan Hamilton said that Van Sickle had been designated sole heir to Austin's estate and had made a deal with Rodriguez to hurry up his inheritance. The fee for this service was to have been $25,000, though the amount was never paid in full.

Detective Hamilton added, "The sole reason for the attempted murder of the female victim was to bolster the illusion of the robbery attempt." Austin's worth was estimated at one million dollars, though it is uncertain whether this includes the value of The Silent Movie Theater and a rare film collection that was obtained from the Hamptons.

It is also now in dispute whether Austin properly obtained the business in the first place. Mrs. Hampton — the widow of the theater's founder — is in a nursing home, and some of her relatives are charging that she didn't understand what she was signing when she signed the place over to Austin a few years back. Various relatives on both sides are now asserting ownership, and several local film societies have voiced an interest in acquiring and/or operating the venerable establishment.

There is also, of course, the claim of James Van Sickle, who is pleading not guilty. The case against him appears strong but who knows? The D.A.'s office might assign the prosecution to Marcia Clark.

Thus, the future (if any) of The Silent Movie Theater is an immense question mark. It was closed once before — seemingly forever — but it rose from the ashes. This time, many factions seem eager to see it up and operating again. But the legal entanglements, if they're as bad as they seem to be, are enough to straighten out Ben Turpin's line of sight.

Through it all, the building sits quietly on Fairfax, closed for business, while various parties fight over the body.

For days following the shootings, it became something of a shrine. Dozens and dozens of floral displays were placed in front of the theater, and hundreds of heartfelt written tributes were taped or pinned up in the front lobby. Movie lovers stopped by at all hours to place and light candles.

I was driving past at around 3:30 one morning and I noticed a man and a woman standing out front, reading the eulogies that had been posted. On an impulse I can't explain, I stopped and joined them.

We never exchanged names, but they were about my age (I'm 45) and relatively new to The Silent Movie Theater. I was a vet, dating back to the early '60s, while they had only been attending since Laurence Austin resurrected the tradition. The three of us just stood out there in the crisp night air for maybe half an hour, swapping memories of The Silent Movie, recalling favored films we had viewed within.

„We were home in bed," the woman said, motioning to her husband. "He was asleep but I was wide awake — just thinking about the theater — about how awful what happened was. Around 2:45, I woke him up and asked him if he'd do something for me — something really weird —"

The husband leaned in: "I was getting excited there for a minute. Then she said, 'I want you to take me to The Silent Movie Theater.'"

The woman added, "I just had to be close to it for a few minutes. I wanted to take a candle and light it — though when we got here, there were already half a dozen candles burning. So we just started reading the poems and writings that people have posted here. They're all very touching. Every one of them."

That says, more than anything I can write here, what The Silent Movie Theater meant to people. Our nation abounds in thousands of modern, state-of-the-art multiplex cinemas, and they show some very fine movies. But if the manager of one of them got shot and the place closed, I can't imagine one single person deciding, at a quarter to 3, that they had to go there and light candles.

The above occurred on the Wednesday night — actually, Thursday morning — following the killing. A few days later, someone broke into the theater, apparently looking for something he or she could steal. All that was taken was a box of candy bars from the tiny refreshment stand, but there was some amount of damage. Metal bars were promptly installed like a fence out front to keep out intruders. That meant the end of the posted tributes, lit candles, and floral arrangements but not, of course, the end of the mourning.

Whether any of this means the end of The Silent Movie Theater is unknown, but we can be sure of one thing. It will never be the same again.

A few weeks ago, we brought you a reminiscence of the great kid show hosts of Los Angeles television. They were the gents who hosted antique animation and sold Bosco chocolate syrup and Farmer John sausage — a particularly fine combination, if you've never tried it.

As ever, when the subject matter here descends into the Appallingly Trivial, I paused to wonder if anyone cared about the subject, apart from yours truly. I needn't have worried. Since that piece came out, though not because of it, we have had a sudden surge of interest in the topic.

TV Guide decided to run an article on the men (and occasional women) who hosted the local kiddy shows in New York, Chicago, and Los Angeles. Several of you e-mailed me to report that chunks of the L.A. segment were cribbed from my article. Not so. The reporter tracked me down, interviewed me for the piece, and I said all the same things I'd said here. In other words, he didn't steal from my column — I did.

At the same time, the L.A. branch of The Museum of Television and Radio announced, as a much-requested event, a program/reunion of our local cartoon jockeys. Thus, last night (March 26), I joined an audience of folks who were all the same, right

JUST FOR FUN

Joyce Greenholdt
CBG Associate Editor

Quest

Dave Morris and Jamie Thomson have begun a new series of "choose your path" adventure books. You choose a character and guide him or her through an adventure, choosing between branching paths of options.

Different characters have different skills, so an adventure will replay differently with different characters. An element of randomness is thrown in by the use of dice.

Each 8¼ x 9¼" softcover volume in the series has a plastic blister on the front cover containing two dice, used to determine the outcome of choices you make that depend on the skill of your character, or to determine which of a series of random occurrences affects your character.

Your chosen character may gain new skills or increase current ones during the adventure, which can run through more than one volume in the series. Code words and special record-keeping boxes keep track of people and places you've encountered before and how they'll react to seeing you again.

While you can start, apparently, with any volume in the series, there's no telling when the adventure may lead you into a different volume — or a dead end, if you don't have that next volume.

That aside, Quest looks like a good diversion if you can't get a group together for real role-playing and there's nowhere to plug in the computer.

Quest: The War-Torn Kingdom; Quest: Cities of Gold and Glory; more to follow, $9.95, Price Stern Sloan.

Point of View

age to have grown up on the shows of Engineer Bill, "Uncle" Jimmy Weldon, Tom Hatten, and Skipper Frank. Taking them one at a time:

Engineer Bill was Bill Stulla, who was the host for awful cartoons on Channel 9, segueing in and out of Spunky and Tadpole by running HO trains about a tabletop. Jimmy Weldon hosted Cartooneroony (I'm still not sure how to spell that) on Channel 13, chatting with a ducky puppet named Webster Webfoot. Tom Hatten was an actor-cartoonist who donned a sailor suit on Channel 5, sketching out Wimpy drawings between Popeye cartoons. And my all-time fave, Skipper Frank Herman, chatted with puppets, ran games, and did magic tricks between Bugs Bunny shorts, also on Channel 5.

It was a thrill to meet The Skipper but jarring to see how old he'd become. Rationally, of course, you know that it works like that. People do age, just as long as they're not Dick Clark.

Still, you think of certain people as somehow being suspended in time, belonging to a given moment. Skipper Frank was probably in his 30s when I started watching him, some 40 years ago. Now, I'm older than he was then and — well, it was a night when I managed to feel very young and very old, both at the same time.

Clips were shown of their glory days on local television, and they spoke of those years, ad-libbing an hour (sometimes more) of live TV every day, working on starvation budgets. I don't know what Tom Hatten's budget was, but a kids' show produced today for Nickelodeon or a network probably spends more on coffee and bagels for the staff.

The shows back then were cheap and shoddy and loaded with commercials — and wonderful. I wonder if today's kids aren't missing out on something. There are some great shows on these days for them, but they don't have the intimacy engendered by a Skipper Frank or an Engineer Bill.

That's about all I have to report. If you didn't grow up in L.A. when they ruled the airwaves, their names and anecdotes mean nothing to you. If you did grow up here back then, you were there last night to hear it all. I hope you had as good a time as I did.

• Since this seems to have turned into an "update" column on me, I should mention that Stan Freberg Presents the United States of America, Vol. 2 did not win the Grammy Award for Best Spoken Comedy Album. I said in my column of March 17 that, if Adam Sandler won, I was moving to Tierra del Fuego.

Well, I'm staying put, since Sandler didn't win, either. Al Franken did for the audiobook version of his best-selling Rush Limbaugh is a Big, Fat Idiot. I don't think it's fair that the Grammy Award Committee expected Stan to compete with that title.

Nevertheless, you still should have a copy of Stan Freberg Presents the United States of America, Vol. 2 in your home library of wonderful comedy albums. If you don't have the first volume, you should snag one of them, too. I keep plugging this thing here but this is the first time I've given you an 800 number. It's (800) 432-0200.

That's the order line for Rhino Records. If you don't have the first volume, call and tell them you want the dual set with both volumes (catalog #72476). If you already have the first part; order just the second one (catalog #72477).

And, while you're at it, ask them about their forthcoming CD of Tom Lehrer rarities. I haven't heard it yet but Lehrer never did anything that wasn't worth your attention, except maybe to teach math.

My name is Mark Evanier. My address is 363 S. Fairfax Ave., #303, Los Angeles, CA 90036. My column is over for this week. Bye.

CBG Profile: Dark Angel Productions

by Joyce Greenhold

Blackjack creator Alex Simmons said he wasn't planning to publish comics when he started his company Dark Angel Productions in 1987. Instead, he formed the entertainment company for the express purpose of producing his play Sherlock Holmes and the Hands of Othello. "I had been working on it for several years, Simmons said, "doing readings and sending it to various theaters. People loved it, but many theaters felt that it was just too costly to produce. I felt it could be done for a quarter of the amount they were quoting."

Simmons organized a team and succeeded in making a small production of the play, with help from a Broadway set designer and lighting designer. "They did it for little money, because they liked the play," Simmons said, adding that the play was well received and was included in an anthology of African-American playwrights.

The final confrontation between Blackjack and The Cobra from the original Blackjack series.

When Simmons decided to produce a comic book, he took the same team approach. Elizabeth Sheehan acted as "my amazing graphic designer. We went to high school together, annoyed some of the same people in life," Simmons said. Simmons described editor William McCay as "an extremely talented author and editor, who, in his spare time, has memorized all of history and a bunch of bad puns." Artist Joe Bennett — "the man who brought my dream to life, but even better" — illustrated the first, full-color, three-issue Blackjack story, "Second Bite of the Cobra." Letterer Ken Bruzenak, Simmons said, made the text of the comic book part of the visuals, "not simply an attachment." Coloring and separations were done by J. Brown and Tech FX. "James is the most underrated color artist in the business, with a sense of color and design that embraces and embellishes each page," Smith said. Production Consultant Meloney C. Chadwick, Smith said, was a "friend, advisor, inspiration, bookie — uh, strike that last one [laughs]. Her greatest contribution has been her amazing kindness, focus, and concern."

Blackjack follows the adventures of an African-American soldier of fortune in the 1930s. "I had the idea more than 10 years ago," Simmons said. "I wanted him to be a hero and a human being, facing struggles bigger than life as well as rooted in life. It wasn't out there then, and, I'm sorry to say, it still was not last year when I finally went to press.

"I believe that, for the comics market to not just survive but also prosper, we need to expand our promotion field and we need to reestablish relations with more of the grassroots marketplaces that fostered comics in the first place."

A second Blackjack tale, Blood and Honor, is coming up from Dark Angel Productions. The full-color, four-issue mini-series is scheduled to begin in late April, and the first issue has a cover by Tim and Greg Hildebrandt and interior art is by Ken Lashley. Jamal Igle and Ravil Lopez created the cover for Blood and Honor #2 — the pair are also the art team for Dark Angel Production's upcoming all-ages series Race against Time, scheduled for a June debut.

Written by Smith, Race against Time is about a 12-year-old boy who discovers that every time his parents leave him in his uncle's care, spies, criminal masterminds, and would-be world conquerors start coming out of the woodwork. Somehow, he and his uncle have to beat the bad guys, foil their plans, and get home — before the parents find out.

"You try to have a good time and give the best quality you can," Smith said. "I need to be able to stand there proudly and display our work, acknowledging its value in my world and blessing the people who helped make it possible. Only then can I go forth and invite the rest of the world to dig in."

By John Jackson Miller
CBG Associate Editor

CBG readers discovered and sent in more than 150 circulation reports in response to our call for Charlton and other sales figures in our last Great Circulation Scavenger Hunt Update (CBG #1213, Feb. 7, 1997). Their contributions took the number of circulation statements in our database to 2,135, well past the half-way point toward our "Stage 1" goal of accounting for all comics industry circulation forms since 1960.

By extrapolating from the 332 comics titles in which we have found circulation figures, we suspect there are 1,860 Statements of Ownership unaccounted for. Some of these potential Statements probably weren't printed at all; CBG readers have already helped us to pare the projected total down to 3,995.

Our "Miscellaneous Publisher Needs" request box brought in about five times the response that our Charlton request box did, which perhaps shouldn't be that surprising. Several of the "Miscellaneous" titles have faithful followings, and we got complete or near-complete information on Mad, Heavy Metal, Treasure Chest, and the Warren titles quickly from several readers. We also received data from two of the publishers themselves — Russ Cochran and Heavy Metal — for which we are deeply grateful. (Now if only Dell, Harvey, and Fawcett still had comics office staffs, this job might be easier!)

Closing out 1996: We've about hit the bottom of the well plumbing for 1996 figures. With the exception of a couple of Archie and Big Entertainment titles we suspect are no longer being published regularly, we're down to such singleton needs as Cracked and Comic Relief. Once they're in (or proved nonexistent), we'll run the full list in our news section.

Our specific DC and Harvey needs appear in the box at upper right and lower right respectively. Watch for future updates relating to other publishers.

Once again, send all data to:

Good luck and happy hunting!

Statements in CBG circulation database

The statements we've got are noted by the black portion of each bar; the clear area represents statements suspected to exist for each year.

What we need: Ideally, we would like to have photocopies of all Statements of Ownership published in any and all comic books to date. Many fans have provided them and, by doing so, they have "closed out" the entry for that title for that year in our database, since the complete form includes all the subscription and other data we're accumulating.

We also accept transcripts summarizing key statistics. These are the most important:

- "Total Paid and/or Requested Circulation." We only want the first figure reported there, that for "Average number of copies of each issue during the preceding 12 months." We do not currently use the "closest to filing date" figure that follows due to reliability concerns.
- We also need the issue number, publisher and cover date of the title you're reporting on.
- Other statistics we're collecting include "number of issues published annually"; "annual subscription price"; "(average) total number of copies printed (net press run)"; "(average) paid and/or requested mail subscriptions"; and "(average) copies not distributed (returns from news agents)."

DC, round two

By popular demand, here are the DC titles for which we're still missing suspected circulation forms — the first half of the alphabet, anyway. In some cases we're just looking for confirmation that figures did not appear; many DC titles had forms with no figures for the years 1963 and 1964. Be careful with 1966 figures; DC printed statements with no numbers in early 1967 before going back in July and August 1967 issues with updated forms with 1966 numbers. We also doubt many figures appear for 1988, when DC stopped shipping Second Class; we've only found them in Action Comics Weekly.

Harveys, anyone? Anyone?

So few readers were able to turn up Charlton forms (outside of a few titles like Phantom, Flintstones, and the horror titles, which were evidently collected by many) that I hesitate to broach what may be the least-collected major publisher of any to ship second-class: Harvey. The list below accounts for all the Harvey titles we have found forms in, ranging from the earliest in 1964 to the latest in 1975. We have so few in each title, I won't even venture to print eligible dates — in the unlikely event something you find duplicates what's in our system, it'll help reconfirm data that was often printed so small it's nearly illegible:

Baby Huey, The Baby Giant
Casper's Ghostland
The Friendly Ghost, Casper
Hot Stuff
Hot Stuff Sizzlers
Little Dot
Little Lotta
Playful Little Audrey
Richie Rich
Sad Sack
Sad Sack and the Sarge
Sad Sack Laugh Special
Spooky
Wendy, the Good Little Witch

As this is only a fraction of long-running Harvey series (particularly when it comes to Richie Rich), there may well be more. You may also find them in the Australian "giant" Harveys, which appear to be bound editions of stripped perfect-bound Harvey comics shipped from the States.

Harvey numbers aren't the hardest to locate, but they're up there. Fawcett, which used to pick a random Dennis the Menace panel to omit, appears to be the all-time champion at hiding Statements. Harvey often placed the data in the comic-strip area of the story pages, but we've seen so few examples that may not be much of a guide.

(While you're at it, if you can turn up a story establishing that Spooky, The Tuff Little Ghost died from smoking cigars, there are some

Here there be dragons

"I wanted to do a series that appealed to all ages and, by that, I don't mean specifically young readers, like the term has come to mean ..."
— James Robinson

St George the Dragon?

It was just a matter of 'Chance'

By Marc Patten

It's a starry night in Devil's Echo, a city unlike most seen in comics. The city has been filled with the supernatural and touches of evil for as long as anyone can remember. But it is not without its protector. For as long as there has been unexplained evil and strange, otherworldly happenings in Devil's Echo, there has been a Falconer there to protect it. Fortunately for 14-year-old Chance Falconer, her father, Lucas, is a hero who lives up to the task of his ancestors. But when dad's away, what's a girl to do when evil comes lurking in her city? Co-creator James Robinson said the title of his series says it all: Leave It to Chance.

Chance Falconer frees her future sidekick, St. George, in this sequence (which continues at the top right of the opposite page) from Leave It to Chance #1.

Robinson said he created the world of Chance Falconer and Devil's Echo as a way to fill a void he saw in comics. "I worked in a comic-book store many years ago and I noticed that girls would read Archie and lighter stuff when they were kids, but when they got to an age where they became more mature in their reading habits there was nothing for them. Comics become a male-dominated medium at that point. Some of them come back into it with the Vertigo titles, but mostly they just stay away.

"I wanted to do a series that appealed to all ages and, by that, I don't mean specifically young readers, like the term has come to mean, but in the way that Rocky and Bullwinkle can appeal to a 7-year-old and a 37-year-old for different reasons."

Robinson said he wanted to create an exciting series that contained elements of fantasy, adventure, and drama that would attract a general audience while, at the same time, having a lead female character that might prove of interest to girls — that Robinson added he sees as a much-neglected segment of the comics-reading public. "It's a very fine line you have to walk. When you do a comic book for girls or females in general, male readers can be turned off. Without offending anyone, comics like that can be a little too sugary. As if to say that's what girls want — these sweet little endearing stories. I think they just want good drama with a protagonist they can identify with."

The other elements that led Robinson to his concepts for Leave It to Chance included his fondness for Nancy Drew novels and a desire to combine those elements with the adventures of the unknown. "I wanted to mix in the Kolchak: The Night Stalker feel of monster hunters and that sort of thing. I felt I also needed a partner in this, as opposed to bringing in an artist to work for me." Robinson approached former X-Men artist Paul Smith, whom he previously worked with on the DC's 1993 mini-series The Golden Age. Coincidentally, Smith had been working on a creator-owned concept involving a female character. Although the pair chose to use Robinson's premise, Smith had a dragon character he wanted to use, so Robinson asked him to bring him along as a sort of Watson to Chance's Holmes.

Leave It to Chance is a story about Chance Falconer and her city, Devil's Echo — a city prone to menaces of a supernatural nature for reasons "that will one day be revealed," according to Robinson. Since the time of the Pilgrims settling on North American shores, there has always been a male bearing the last name of Falconer acting as the occult protector of Devil's Echo. The role of protector is passed down through the generations.

When Chance turned 14, she went to her father and asked to begin her apprenticeship as the city's next protector, but her father refused, because Chance was a girl. This was understandable, considering that Lucas' wife and Chance's mother was killed by his archenemy Miles Belloc in a horrible battle, which also resulted in the disfigurement of Lucas' face. The danger to Chance, he felt, would be too great. The continuing story involves the girl's constant attempts to prove to her father that she is worthy of her legacy.

"We wanted a story where you could jump on at any point without a lot of backstory or details and enjoy a good, exciting story," said Robinson. "It's much the same approach as a good Batman story. You don't need to know more than his parents were killed by criminals so he hates them and goes out at night to destroy evil. The Joker and Arkham and the little bits of continuity are interesting, but you don't have to know them to read and enjoy the story."

The creative duo now had a story to tell but no publisher. Robinson said a standard proposal was sent out to a number of publishers, with little response. "We were worried that we might have to publish it ourselves, so we wrote it as a four-issue mini-series. Now the saga will continue as one- or two-issue storylines which will build and build into the bigger picture. But it will never become so convoluted that you can't pick up one or two issues and know exactly where you are."

Initially, the project received a lot of interest from Bongo Comics, the publisher of Simpsons Comics. "Matt Groening thought the series might be a bit too serious for his readership. He wanted to stick to comedy. Ultimately, he passed on the project." According to Robinson, the project languished at both Dark Horse and DC, where it inevitably got lost in the shuffle. "It literally free-floated for a day, and, during that time, Kurt Busiek, who read the proposal, handed it to Jim Lee. I believe Jim read it on a Monday and we were asked to be a part of Homage Comics on Tuesday."

If Leave It to Chance proves popular enough, Robinson expressed a desire to produce a series that would delve into the histories of past Falconers and their adventures, which Robinson and Smith would open up to other writers and artists to do. "We'd also like to do a special which shows the founding of Devil's Echo and August Falconer, who was the first protector, appearing out of the wilderness to tame the supernatural menace that was threatening the pilgrims." This would lead to the naming of Devil's Echo as a city and establish the mainstay of a Falconer as its protector.

James Robinson has become a much sought-after writer in comics recently. He has written superhero comics ranging from Batman to WildC.A.T.S, but he said his approach to each project is distinct. Leave It to Chance is no exception, especially since there isn't a costumed character in it. "I try to keep it lighter, for one thing. I try to never have more than a page of dialogue per comic-book page. As opposed to the full-script format I use on Starman, I give Paul a chunk of script and then the dialogue that accompanies it.

I sometimes do feel a flaw with the Marvel style [in which a plot is given to the artist, who draws the story and give the art pages back to the writer to dialogue] is that there is not enough room for nuance. Paul grew up on the Marvel style, and he enjoys his freedom of breaking down a story. I trust him implicitly. The way we work is that I give him the dialogue for a page and a little bit of plot for what goes on that page." Robinson emphasized that he is trying provide an intensity and dynamic style of storytelling that is crucial to a good action-adventure comic book, but "I try not to be too clever in my storytelling. I try to be very simple in a dynamic way, so that readers who aren't used to such a style aren't turned off."

There are some traditional features of comics that readers won't see much of in Leave It to Chance — there are no thought balloons or captions and almost no narrative captions. "I try and do as much of the exposition as I can through dialogue, as opposed to a lot of internalization. I have plenty of opportunities to do that in Starman, so I approach this in a far gentler way."

The dragon in Leave It to Chance, while not part of Robinson's original premise, has received a positive response from fans, and Robinson was quick to say that now he finds it difficult to picture his favorite character without St. George flying behind her. Why name the dragon after the legendary dragon slayer instead of a name with actual dragon heritage? Robinson said, "A) because it's ironically funny, and B) I'm going for accessibility. People don't know the name of the dragon that St. George slew, but everyone knows St. George slew dragons."

Longtime X-Men readers may remember Smith as the creator of Lockheed, the little dragon adopted by Kitty Pryde in the 1980s. "Paul had been sketching Lockheed with The X-Men in his sketchbook, and apparently Chris Claremont saw it and said let's bring this character into the series," Robinson said. "I guess Paul felt that the character was lost to him, being the property of Marvel, and he'd enjoyed having fun with him. He said to me, 'Do you think it would be too obvious that I'm sort of plagiarizing myself?' and I said, 'Not at all.'

"Paul took great pains to make St. George unique visually. He has an overbite, unlike Lockheed, who has an underbite. He shoots napalm-like phlegm, which is nothing like breathing fire in the traditional sense."

While Robinson said he would like to explore St. George's background and more dragon lore in the future, for now he's concentrating on building a rogue's gallery for Chance and wants to expand on her relationship with her father and Devil's Echo.

„We're going to do a two-part story at the end of the first 12-issue arc, where Chance makes herself small and visits the kingdom in the garden (seen in issue #1). Previously, we've just seen Dash, a sort of fairy from there. Chance gets herself involved in a who-done-it type of mystery in that world." Apparently, the shrinking spell doesn't work as well on St. George, and for those two issues, Chance and the characters in the fantasy world will appear normal-sized, while the dragon will look enormous, "like a proper dragon," said Robinson.

Robinson and Smith's love for dogs purposely shows through in their portrayal of St. George. "I have a dog that I love dearly, like you wouldn't believe," said Robinson. "When I write him [St. George], I try and give him the personality of a very intelligent dog. I try to show him like a dolphin who is as intelligent as a human but thinks in a different way, being a sea creature. St. George is as intelligent as a human, he just thinks in a completely different manner."

There are no plans to add any dragon characters into Robinson's other projects, and he won't be delving into dragon lore any time soon. "Jack will be heading into space in Starman, so I'll have to knuckle down and read a lot of books on space travel and physics for the next arc."

Likewise, Lockheed won't be joining Generation X or Cable in the stories he's writing for those Marvel titles. "He's kind of linked to Kitty Pryde in Excalibur right now. What I'm trying to do with Cable is make the backstory superfluous to the character. Right now, you have to know so much about the character to understand who he is and what he's about. I want to make the concept of the character simpler. I want to keep him the knight in shining armor, more like Gawain than Lancelot, I suppose."

He compared The X-Men to the knights of the round table, with Professor X as King Arthur. "Cable is the lone knight out there in the world doing brave deeds, and he isn't involved in all that continuity. In the way that his name, Cable, is supposed to symbolize his link to the future and the present, I want him to be the link between the X-universe and the Marvel universe, having him meet The Black Panther, The Inhumans, and even Captain America in issue #50."

Robinson added that he plans to work on two story arcs for Event Comics' Ash. the second arc featuring a crossover with Leave It to Chance. "You'll be able to see lots of dragon and firefighting action going on there," he said.

A recent announcement is the crossover of Batman, Starman, and Mike Mignola's Hellboy by Robinson and Mignola. "It's been approved, and I believe we're just waiting for the legal stuff to be worked out," Robinson said.

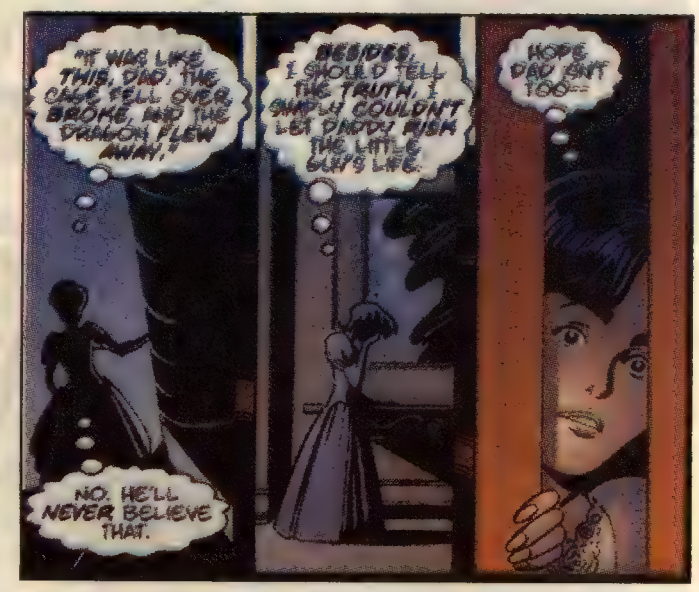
The stories for issues #5-12 of Leave It to Chance are mapped out, as Robinson and Smith relax into the schedule of an ongoing series. "Issues #5-8 will get the readers used to Chance's world and will all be one- or two-issue stories," said Robinson. "The ethnic areas of the city are Haitian, Scottish, and Egyptian, which gives me a chance to incorporate different types of magic and mysticism into the book. In the Scottish section, there is a gang called The Beehive who wield their own sort of magic. We meet them in issue #5. They're based on a gang from Glasgow, considered to be the roughest city in Scotland. Issues #6 and #7 will have a two-part story that will introduce rogues to Chance's Rogue's Gallery, so to speak."

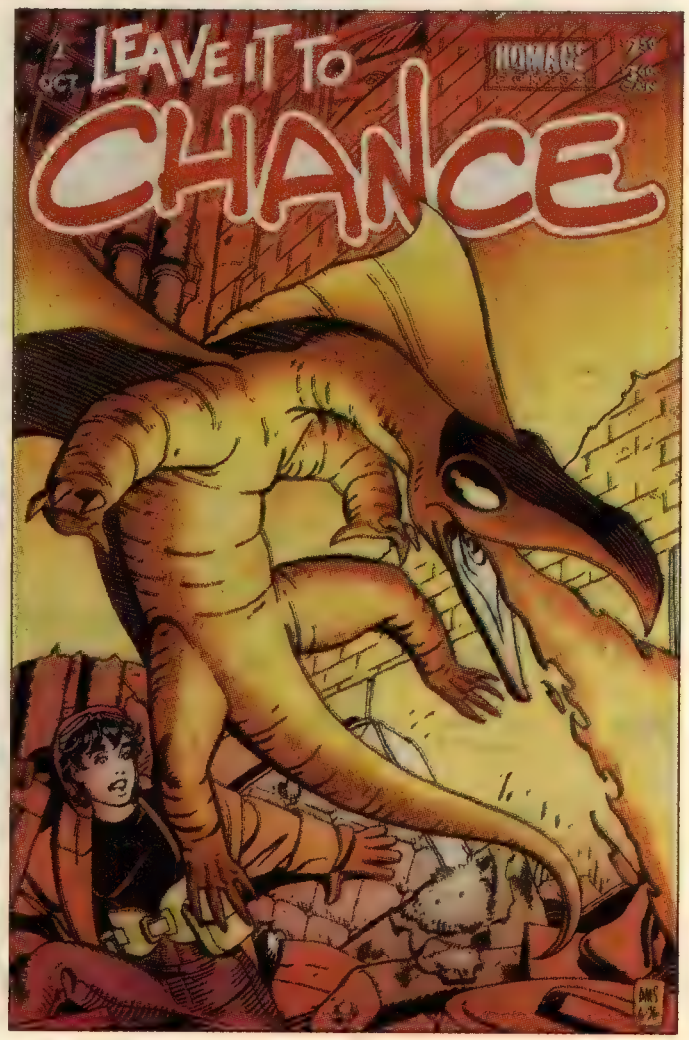
First, after being sent away to school, Chance meets a ghost called Captain Hitch, who was sent to his demise by an ancestor of Chance's. "He will continue to haunt the docks of Devil's Echo causing all sorts of mischief. Issue #8 will introduce a character called The Phantom of the Mall who is a Phantom of the Opera type of figure. Issues #9-12 will be single-issue stories. Issue #9 will feature a solo Chance story. Issue #10 will focus on Lucas Falconer and his 'Watson,' police Lt. Saunders."

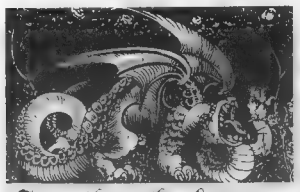
Issues #11 and #12 form the two-parter involving Chance and St. George's visit to the garden fairyland that Dash is from.

So does James Robinson believe in winged, mythical, fire-breathing creatures? "I believe in a lot of things that many people would think I'm nuts for believing in but I have to say I fall short on dragons. I think they're a delightful fantasy."

Marc Patten is a freelance writer who doesn't believe in dragons, but living in New York City, he tends to see people breathing fire late at night in the subway tunnels, when no one is looking.

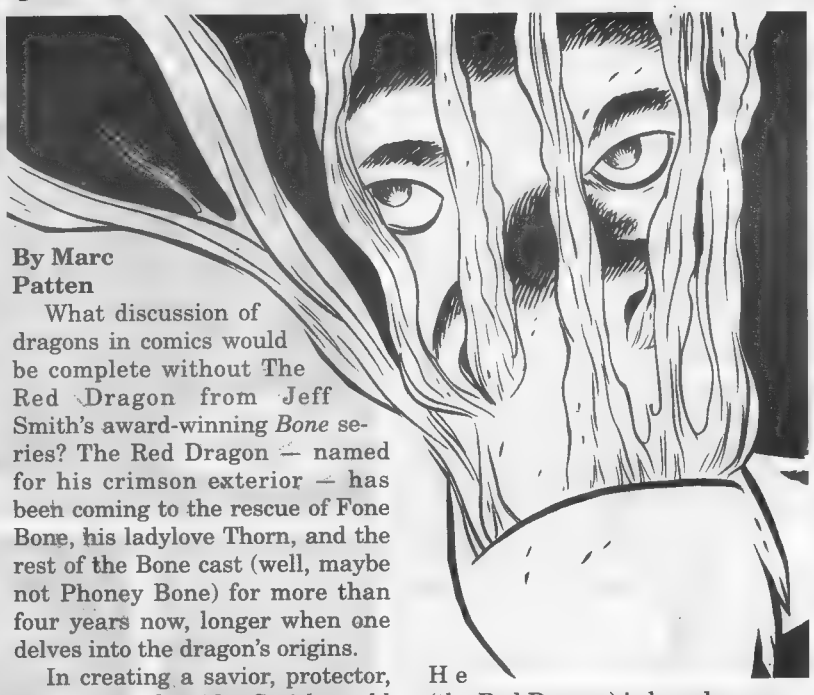






Here there be dragons

Jeff Smith reveals the origins of The Red Dragon



"If you look at books or encyclopedias about dragons, you're not going to find too many that have big floppy Santa Claus balls on their ears, but goatees are pretty common."
— Jeff Smith

By Marc Patten

What discussion of dragons in comics would be complete without The Red Dragon from Jeff Smith's award-winning Bone series? The Red Dragon — named for his crimson exterior — has been coming to the rescue of Fone Bone, his ladylove Thorn, and the rest of the Bone cast (well, maybe not Phoney Bone) for more than four years now, longer when one delves into the dragon's origins.

In creating a savior, protector, and spiritual guide, Smith could have created any number of characters, still, he chose the form of a dragon. Not your average, run-of-the-mill dragon. His looks and personality are far from the norm, and Smith said he likes it that way.

"The actual way I came up with the Dragon was pretty unconscious. It was 1978, and I was reading Heavy Metal and into fantasy and Lord of the Rings. I would draw my Bone characters battling The Dragon, and the character eventually evolved into what he is now. I didn't sit there and think, 'Gosh, I've got to have a good-guy dragon.' Over the years, he became a friend of Fone Bone, and when I began the comic book, he fell right into place as the protector — the wise mentor who could help Fone Bone get through his trials and adventures."

Smith added that the Red Dragon (he has no other name, by the way) wasn't inspired by or based on another character in fiction. "He was based in some part on my dog," Smith laughed. "I had a very large, powerful dog who was very loyal and very laid back.

He (the Red Dragon) is based more on Oriental dragons, as far as his place in dragon mythology, than on Western dragons. Western dragons, to my understanding, are like the dragons that St. George slew (the guy — not the cute little dragon in Leave It to Chance) or that Bilbo faced in Lord of the Rings. These are large, fire-breathing dragons who are basically evil and they hoard things — virgins and princesses and pots of gold. They have no use for those things, they just hoard them, because that's what they do. Eastern dragons are friendly and are protectors."

The Red Dragon is physically very different from the images most people are familiar with. "If you look at books or encyclopedias about dragons, you're not going to find too many that have big floppy Santa Claus balls on their ears, but goatees are pretty common. I think of him as one of the older dragons, which is why you'll find elements of Eastern and Western dragons in him. He's the offspring of the first dragon to exist in Bone mythology, and they're very long-lived."

Smith said that the history of dragons in Bone is tied to the age of the dinosaurs. "My dragon looks a lot more like a dinosaur than a serpent. He has a brontosaurus-like body, he has the hindquarters of a lion, he has the arms of a human, and the head of a Christmas donkey," Smith said, laughing. And of course, he breathes fire. After all, how else could a large, red, floppy-eared dragon protect the innocent?

Like most fantasy worlds inhabited by a dragon or three, Smith's creative playground and the lore involving dragons is unique. The dreaming or dreamtime state is a major focal point. "As opposed to The Dreaming in DC's The Sandman, the dreaming in Bone is based on the dreaming of the Australian aborigines. That basically represents the time before Man was conscious. Man's waking state was like a dream. This is the essence of aborigine dreamtime. In my mythology, the dragons controlled the dreaming — that state of unconsciousness. They were the rulers of the earth, sort of like the dinosaurs were. There came a point in Bone mythology where the dragons had to hand over control of the dreaming to humans."

These humans happen to be the ancestors of Thorn and Gran'ma Ben, according to Smith. "The Red Dragon is the one who handed the dreaming over to the humans, who had finally become conscious, because of circumstances derived from a catastrophic occurrence."

This is a background fact that regular readers of Bone may not have realized yet, as Smith has kept it under wraps. The actual catastrophe is part of the Bone story, but Smith wouldn't reveal details yet.

The transference ushered in a long era of human monarchs and kingdoms. In current-day Bone continuity, an event occurred that disrupted the hierarchy, ending the existence of kingdoms. The result of the collapsed ruling system is that the dreaming is up for grabs. The link between Thorn and The Red Dragon is slowly being revealed, and, Smith emphasized, "Dragons are a very key part of my universe."

The Red Dragon's role in Bone will continue to evolve from his initial part as protector of Fone Bone. "He's going to play a pivotal role in Thorn's life in an upcoming issue that is a big dragon story," said Smith.

Smith said he is fond of the little dragon in Leave It to Chance, but said that his favorite reptilian serpent is The Lambton Worm. The story — which dates from 1420 — involves a little boy who skips Sunday school to go fishing in the river. He catches a giant, dragon-like serpent, then flees his homeland in terror. The serpent, now free of the river, begins to engulf people, livestock, etc., and grows so large that it encircles the village and holds it under its control. No one is able to slay the beast, though many from far-off lands try and are eaten. Sacrifices are made to the creature. The boy, now grown, returns to the village feeling responsible, dons a suit of armor and attempts to fight the serpent. It isn't until he heeds the advice of a wise frog, who instructs him to lure the beast back to the river that spawned him, that he is successful.

The heroic crimson-hued dragon has been very busy recently. Scheduled to ship in May is a fourth Bone collection: The Dragon Slayer. "For the past few years, Phoney Bone has been conning the villagers to pay him treasure to slay a dragon. He has fed on their fear of the unknown and their suspicions of things that go bump in the night and he hasn't done anything," Smith said. "Finally, things are coming to a head, and the villagers are saying, 'Listen, we've been feeding you for a year. Slay a dragon!' Phoney comes up with an idea that he can load up all this treasure and have the villagers take him up to the crest of the mountain and, from there, he can make a mad dash for Boneville. He just needs protection through the valley because the rat creatures are after him."

Of course, Phoney Bone's brilliant plans tend to get skewed by unforeseen circumstances. The climax of "The Dragon Slayer" tale (Bone #27) is now in stores.

Dragon Con moves to Atlanta Market Center in '97

By Paul W. Cashman

Dragon Con/Atlanta Comics Expo (A.C.E.) is scheduled for June 26-29. The show features more than 450 hours of panels, workshops, demonstrations, and discussions and this year, the show has moved from the Atlanta Hilton (which was getting increasingly cramped over the past three years) to Atlanta's Market Center complex, which includes a Broadway-style theater, the Inforum Convention Center, Atlanta Merchandise Mart, Atlanta Apparel Mart, and Atlanta Gift Mart. More than 5000 hotel rooms are accessible by climate-controlled overhead tubes, with more than 12,000 hotel rooms available within an eight-block radius of the Center.

The exhibit hall and dealer's room is the largest ever offered at Dragon Con. More than 300,000 square feet have been allocated for the dealer's room, exhibit hall, art show, programming, and other activities. Nightly concerts and dances will be held in the Inforum. Scheduled performers include GWAR, Doomsday (sponsored by Chaos! Comics), and Iced Earth (with selections from their album based on Todd McFarlane's Spawn). Programming is also scheduled at The Atlanta Merchandise Mart, just west of the Hyatt.

Host hotels for this year's show are the Atlanta Hyatt Regency and the Western Peachtree Plaza. Overflow hotels include the Best Western American, Days Inn Atlanta, Inn at the Peachtrees, Howard Johnson Downtown Atlanta, Super 8 Hotel, Ramada Hotel, Courtyard by Marriott, Fairfield Inn, and Carter Hall Efficiencies.

The Hyatt will be the site for game tournaments, all-night open gaming, and the fan and pro hospitality suites; the Westin will serve as a base for the six scheduled live-action role-playing events and a haunted house created by special-effects experts Bill Johnson and Billy Messina. Both hotels are close to the many eating places and shops on Peachtree and have climate-controlled access to Peachtree Center Mall.

This year's guest list is one of the largest in the show's history. Scheduled comics guests include: Art Adams, Michael Allred, Peter Bagge, Jim Balent, Bernie Wrightson, Ben Edlund, John Byrne, Paul Dini, Jeff Smith, Joe Quesada, Jim Steranko, Charles Vess, Billy Tucci, Mark Waid, Linda Medley, and Peter David.

Joe Quesada is one of the scheduled guests at this year's Dragon Con/Atlanta Comics Expo.

In addition, guests from the world of science fiction, fantasy, and movies are scheduled to attend, including: Charlton Heston, Greg and Tim Hildebrandt, C.J. Cherryh, Clive Barker, Matthew J. Costello, Raymond E. Feist, Robert Jordan, Mercedes Lackey, Margaret Weis, Brian Lumley, Kevin J. Anderson, Doug Bradley, Rudy Coby, Fred Olen Ray, Kenny Baker, Peter Mayhew, and David Prowse.

This year, Dragon Con has scheduled up to 20 concurrent tracks of programming, including panels, contests, and workshops covering comics, science fiction, gaming, and many other areas.

There's also a chance to sell off unwanted treasures at the show's consignment auctions. A grand masquerade and costume contest, as well as a hall costume contest for the stage-wary, are planned, along with Throb's annual Bettie Page tribute, the sixth annual robot battles competition, a comic-book quick-sketch competition, and an amateur video contest.

Free shuttle service between the convention center and area hotels is available, although the maximum distance from the show to a convention hotel is no more than three city blocks. For more information or to request a free 24-page progress report, call the Dragon Con offices at (770) 925-0115.

Convention passes for all four days can be reserved in advance from Ticketmaster at (404) 249-6400. Daily passes will also be available at the Inforum Convention Center during the show.

John Byrne is also scheduled to attend this year's Dragon Con/Atlanta Comics Expo.

Dragon Con/Atlanta Comics Expo 1997 Basic Information

When: June 26-29

Where: The main portion of the show will be held in Atlanta's Market Center complex with some gaming taking place at the attached Atlanta Hyatt Regency and the Westin Peachtree Plaza.

Show hours: Dragon Con begins at 10 a.m. June 26 and activities continue around-the-clock until 5 p.m. Sunday June 29. Registration open each day in the atrium lobby of the Inforum at the Market Center at the following hours:

June 25: 8 p.m.

S.T.A.R.S. trade-only show precedes convention

The Southeast Trade and Retail Symposium (S.T.A.R.S.) has doubled in size this year and has moved (along with Dragon Con/A.C.E.) to Atlanta's Inforum Convention Center. Held all day Wednesday and Thursday morning prior to the start of the 11th Annual Dragon Con/A.C.E., S.T.A.R.S. gives retailers an opportunity to meet with publishers, manufacturers, and distributors, as well as each other. The S.T.A.R.S. show is open to the trade only; members of the general public will not be admitted.

S.T.A.R.S. registration begins at 10 a.m. June 25. Three separate tracks of educational seminars are scheduled to begin at 1 p.m.: Games Retailing, Comics Retailing, and General Business. Programs include:

- Customer Service: Nuke the Competition and Steal Their Gold!
- Cheap (and Free!) Advertising
- How to Write a Press Release (and Who Do You Send It To?)
- The Entertainment Dimension of Merchandising: If it Feels Good — Buy it! How an Emotional Response to a Product can Translate into Dollars
- So Much to Choose From: How to Pick Book Titles that will Sell in Your Store
- Money for Nothing: How to Create Store Interest and Increase Your Sales
- Positive Public Relations: The Art of "Business as Usual" in the Public Eye
- What's Available in Data Processing Systems for Stores?
- Hosting In-Store Appearances and Events
- Does a Monopoly Distribution System Benefit the Retailer?
- Detection of and Dealing with Employee Theft
- Double Your Business Overnight: Selling Comics to Women.

At 8 p.m. Wednesday evening, the S.T.A.R.S. 100,000-square-foot exhibit hall will open for a three-hour preview and autograph party. Scheduled exhibitors include: Chaos!, Comic Book Legal Defense Fund, Crusade, Dark Horse, DC, Diamond Comic Distributors, Event, Fantagraphics, Gaijin Studios, Georgia Music Distributors, Todd McFarlane Productions, Moore Creations, Rudy Coby, Trilogy (Charles Vess, Jeff Smith, and Linda Medley), The Unicorn Publishing House, Inc. (Tim and Greg Hildebrandt), Verotik, and Warp Graphics.

The S.T.A.R.S. Annual Retailer Roundtable (Retailers Unplugged) is scheduled for Thursday morning, June 26, and includes a continental breakfast. Discussions at the 1996 Roundtable concentrated on how exclusive-distribution arrangements affect customer service. This year's forum is aimed at solving common problems and will be moderated by representatives of the retail community. S.T.A.R.S. also invites representatives from publishers, manufacturers, and distributors.

Following Retailers Unplugged, the S.T.A.R.S. Exhibit Hall will reopen for another two and a half hours before the official start of Dragon Con/A.C.E. at 1 p.m. Thursday.

Registration is $10 per person through May 31, and $15 per registrant at the door. Attendance is limited to four representatives per store location. S.T.A.R.S. will present each store location that registers by May 31 a signed and numbered limited-edition lithograph by Charles Vess. For additional information about S.T.A.R.S., call (770) 925-0115.

Dragon Con/A.C.E. '96 had something for everyone

After its first decade, Dragon Con/A.C.E. looks to the future

By Paul W. Cashman

Dragon Con/Atlanta Comics Expo (A.C.E.) has grown tenfold in its 10 years of existence. Approximately 1400 fans attended the first show in 1987. A decade later, approximately 14,000 fans attended Dragon Con '96. More than 350 professionals and a volunteer staff of more than 800 helped make the show run smoothly.

Michael Moorcock made his first formal convention appearance in more than 10 years as the guest of honor at that first show. Other guests at the inaugural show included Michael T. Gilbert and Robert Gould.

One of Dragon Con's strong suits is that its staffing has remained relatively stable — more than 75% of the first show's directors still play an active role in the con, providing vital experience that has helped the show grow. Dragon Con/A.C.E. has also attracted workers from cities and convention committees throughout North America and beyond.

After seven years of conventions at the Atlanta Hilton and Towers, the show has signed an agreement, beginning this year, with the larger Atlanta Market Center, extending through the year 2005.

The agreement has allowed Dragon Con/A.C.E. to set the dates for its yearly shows for the duration of the agreement. Dragon Con's schedule for the next nine years is:

June 26-29, 1997
Sept. 3-6, 1998
July 1-4, 1999
June 29-July 2, 2000
June 28-July 1, 2001
June 27-June 30, 2002
June 19-22, 2003

With an estimated 14,000 attendees over a four-day weekend, the fans at Dragon Con/Atlanta Comics Expo '96 defied easy categorization. If there is one thing they share, it is an interest in the fantastic, the imaginative, and, be it past or future, a time different from our own. That and, perhaps, a preference for the color black.

15-year-old Aragorn Rahm said his earliest memories include attending a small convention that his parents founded while students at Virginia Tech. In Atlanta, they were off at a reading while Rahm paused for a sandwich outside a darkened convention room showing Japanese animated films and psychotronic videos.

Most boys Rahm's age congregated in other darkened convention rooms sponsored by videogame companies. Inside one, heads were silhouetted by the bluish glow from 47 Acer computer monitors on desks against the walls.

Billy Tucci is just one of the many guests scheduled to attend this year's Dragon Con/Atlanta Comics Expo.

The room had filled up since Mark Hamill stopped signing autographs down the hall to promote the release of the latest computer game in the Wing Commander series.

Trekkers were out in force, with the most visible being the Klingon warriors. But even the Klingons expressed admiration at a father-son pair from Tampa, Fla. Their matching black get-ups included rubber tubing, spinning sensors, and red blinking lights — all fashioned at home with battery packs, mercury switches, and "lots of glue guns." They would compete that evening in the Masquerade Ball as Borg, "the only race that everybody in Star Trek feared," said father Chris Johnson. He had taken two days off from his job as a prison counselor to attend his second Dragon Con. Johnson described himself as a long-time fan of the original Star Trek. "The series exemplifies a fairly utopian society," he said. "It's great."

Johnson and his son were also fans of Monty Python, which they proved by simultaneously chanting, "We are the Borg that say Nee! Nee! Nee! Nee! Nee! Nee!" as they went off to tour more of the show.

Jeff Russell, 33-year-old president and CEO of Atlanta-based Netsurfer, Inc. described himself as a more casual Dragon Con Atlanta Comics Expo attendee. "I'm just a fan at heart," he said. "Always have been."

Along with dancing at the rock concert later that night, Russell said he had come to people-watch and browse the exhibitors' displays. "If I see something that I've never seen and maybe never will again, and it interests me, maybe I'll buy it," he said.

One unique vendor was Museum Replicas, a company for those like Chris Seebacher, who needed armor to wear in battle on an upcoming Sunday afternoon. Seebacher, 27, said he works the Museum Replica booth at conventions when he's not running role-playing tournaments for his other employer, Atlas Games. Off days are spent at Renaissance festivals or medieval combat reenactments, where fellow weekend warriors have at each other with rattan "swords" wrapped in duct tape. "This sword here," Seebacher said, resting his hand on the three-foot-long steel blade belted to his waist, "is totally illegal on the battlefield."

Seebacher is a member of the Society for Creative Anachronism, an international non-profit organization that encourages its members to research medieval-history topics of personal interest, ranging from sword-forging techniques to cooking to music to the derivation of the word "Bubba." (It's Finnish and has been in the vernacular nearly a millennium.)

Some at Dragon Con/Atlanta Comics Expo choose to focus on the future. Tonya Spanks, a 29-year-old telemarketer from Decatur, Ga., is chief of security at the weekly meetings of her local Star Trek fan club.

"What Star Trek means to me is, in the future, people are beyond racial, religious, and political classifications," she said. "Not that there won't be racial or religious or political issues to deal with, but people won't be so hung up about who is what. This is like another world for me."

Basing her costume on a character from the original series, Spanks had wrapped herself in flowing white fabric and covered the right side of her face and shoulders in white body paint, leaving her naturally black skin untouched on the left. She was still smarting from her poor finish in the afternoon's hall costume contest, but said she had resolved to enjoy the rest of the day. Dragon Con/Atlanta Comics Expo wouldn't be the same without its infinite variety. As Spanks said, "If it's not here, it probably doesn't exist."

Self-publishing trio hits the road for a Trilogy Tour

Dragon Con is the first convention stop on the Trilogy Tour, a cross-country promotional event staged by Bone creator Jeff Smith, The Book of Ballads and Sagas' Charles Vess, and Castle Waiting creator Linda Medley. A display featuring characters and props from all three series will be set up in the Dragon Con/A.C.E. exhibit hall.

According to Vess, "When we came up with the concept of the tour last summer, we had no idea of the troubles that would beset our industry throughout 1996. So now more than ever, we know that what our industry needs is a little excitement and a lot of fun put back into its world. That's what this tour is really all about: we are optimistic, starry-eyed, and ready to do battle with the doom and gloom that besets us. The heck with the dark ages, let's join the Renaissance of comics."

The Trilogy Tour takes to the open road after Dragon Con, travelling to the Chicago Comicon July 4-6 and then to San Diego for Comicon International July 17-20, with stops at other sites in between.

A Poole painting is the prize for attendees

An original painting by illustrator Mark Poole based on his Magic: The Gathering Legends card "Jedit Ojanen" will be given to one of Dragon Con's attendees at the close of the show June 29. The winner's name will be chosen by Poole.

Poole featured the character on the cover of Acclaim's Magic: The Gathering — The Legend of Jedit Ojanen mini-series.

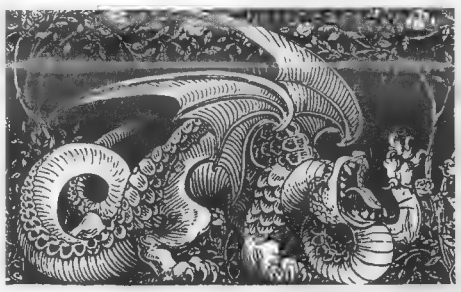
Marv Wolfman and Craig Miller put a dragon in your pocket

'T.H.U.N.D.E.R. Agents' is among projects of new animation production company



Here there be dragons

Writers Craig Miller and Marv Wolfman have formed WolfMill Entertainment to develop and produce live-action and animated television programming aimed at the children's and young-adult market.

Miller said, "We've been working in this area for a long time but, up until now, we've always been hired by other people to create shows for them. We're concerned about quality, both the production values and content, and feel that the best way to ensure both is for us to be more involved in the ongoing shows."

Pocket Dragon Adventures is aimed at 6 to 10-year-old boys and girls and tells non-violent adventure stories about a group of pocket-size dragons who live in a wizard's castle and interact with a variety of magicians, elves, gargoyles, and other strange characters.

The series is based on artist Real Musgrave's characters, which also exist as posters, etchings, and a line of collectible figures sold throughout Europe and Japan. The series is currently in production through Bohbot Entertainment & Media, Inc. and D'Ocon Films.

Karen Lee Brown, Bohbot Executive Vice President and General Manager, said, "We're very excited about this show. It isn't something that's going to be on the air and gone in a year or two. Pocket Dragon Adventures is going to be part of the children's landscape for many, many years to come."

Pocket Dragon Adventures will make its international debut in the fall. Domestically, it will air as part of Bohbot Entertainment's syndicated two-hour Amazing Adventures block. Miller and Wolfman are executive producers and will write the series. International distribution has also been arranged through Bohbot, with the series booked to air throughout western and eastern Europe, Scandinavia, Asia, and South America starting in 1998.

WolfMill is also developing T.H.U.N.D.E.R. Agents as an animated series. Originally created by Wally Wood in the late 1960s, T.H.U.N.D.E.R Agents is an action-adventure series about a group of superhero agents — Dynamo, Noman, Raven, Lightning, and Menthor. These heroes face challenges from international crime cartels, a race of subterranean cavern dwellers, and aliens from outer space. Their most down-to-earth villain is Iron Maiden, a criminal genius in a form-fitting metal bodysuit.

Both partners in WolfMill Entertainment have a long history of working with children and children's projects.

Miller acquired degrees in Child Development and Social Psychology before he began working for George Lucas on the marketing of Star Wars and other films. He spent the next 10 years as a marketing consultant to the motion-picture industry, working on films such as The Empire Strikes Back, Superman II, Excalibur, The Muppets Take Manhattan, and Splash, before trying his hand at writing.

Miller has spent the last decade writing, developing, and producing television, almost all of it for the children's market. His career includes projects ranging from a syndicated magic special to Sesame Street. Recently, he consulted with Jack Valenti and the Washington D.C. Implementation Group working on developing the rating system for children's television.

Wolfman was a teacher in New York but soon turned to writing. He has written for several comics titles and has been editor in chief of Marvel Comics, senior editor at DC Comics, and comics editor for Disney Adventures Magazine. He has written children's books and novels, as well as writing and editing dozens of episodes of animated children's television. Wolfman has also written live stage shows and interactive game rides for theme parks.

With the formation of WolfMill Entertainment, the pair have begun developing and producing animation and live-action children's series based not only on their own creations but, as in the case of Pocket Dragons Adventures and T.H.U.N.D.E.R. Agents, on projects in other fields.

Wolfman said, "Coming up with ideas is not difficult. A lot of people can do that. Carefully developing the ideas so the characters and shows remain interesting over a long period of time requires a different set of skills. We've created and written comics, animation, and other properties that have lasted more than a decade and 200 stories, and characters that have survived longer than that. Our goal is to create perennials, whether for animation, live-action, games, or books. Our interest is the long run."

WildStorm Studios plans to trim and consolidate its line, as creators turn their full attention to the WildStorm universe following their involvement in Marvel's Heroes Reborn project.

Grifter's solo title will be canceled as the character is folded back into the WildC.A.T.S. Backlash will also be canceled, but Backlash and Taboo will appear in a new Bret Booth series called WildCORE.

Tied in with the changes is a new promotional program, set to begin in July with WildC.A.T.S #40. At least one title each month between July and December is scheduled to be released as part of the WildStorm: New Horizons line.

Half the print run of the first issue of each New Horizons title will have a variant cover by Travis Charest; a New Horizons: Voyager Pack, containing the regular-cover edition of that title and a 16-page Voyager edition of the following month's New Horizons title or titles will also be available.

The 16-page Voyager Edition will have at least eight pages of story exclusive to the Voyager edition, as well as sketchbook material and creator interviews.

The Voyager Pack bagged with WildC.A.T.S #40 will contain a preview of a new series by Jim Lee. Lee said, "New Horizons is more than a marketing campaign — it's a whole new way of approaching WildStorm's publishing philosophy. By the end of the New Horizons launch, you'll see a trimmed-down WildStorm, with guaranteed shipping, top creators, and a comic-book line anybody would be proud of."

WildC.A.T.S #40 will also feature a new creative team composed of writers Brandon Choi and Jonathan Peterson, penciller Mat Broome, and inker Troy Hubbs. The WildC.A.T.S travel through time and initiate plot elements that will be picked up in other New Horizons titles.

StormWatch, WetWorks, and DV8 will also go through creator changes as part of the New Horizons program.

Kitchen Sink is releasing a series of graphic novels collecting stories from Penthouse Comix and Penthouse Men's Adventure Comix.

The April-shipping Penthouse Comix Presents #1: Miss Adventure (color,72 pages, $14.95) collects the super-heroine's encounters with the likes of Sister Sapphos, Dixie Snake Eyes, Mr. Mentos, and the Female Bureau of Investigation in stories written by George Carragonne and Keith Giffen and drawn by Cary Polkowitz and Terry Austin.

London Night reports Geena Davis and Renny Harlin have teamed with producer Jeff Most to produce a Razor syndicated TV show. Davis is known for acting in films such as Thelma and Louise. Harlin, Davis' husband, has directed Die Hard 2 and other films. Most recently, the two collaborated on The Long Kiss Goodnight. Most was producer of The Crow.

A tentative production date of December 1997 has been set for Razor.

Meanwhile, a Tommi Gunn motion picture based on the London Night comic book is reportedly in pre-production and is scheduled for 1998 release. Heather Elizabeth Parkhurst is slated to star.

Caliber prepares to launch new LEGENDLORE series

"Somebody won't have to have read the previous Realm stuff or even the initial LegendLore story to be able to pick up 'The Realm Wars' and understand it."
— Joe Martin

By Melissa Pruett

It is a legendary land with a deep, rich history. It is a realm inhabited by elves, faeries and, yes, dragons. It is called A'zoth, and is the setting of Caliber's primary fantasy title, LegendLore. The current series, subtitled "The Realm Wars," is written by Joe Martin and illustrated by Philip Xavier, a duo which has completed a total of nine issues throughout 1996 and early '97.

"I love it," said Martin. "LegendLore has so much potential, and I'm thrilled that Gary [Reed, Caliber's publisher] decided that I'm the one to do the telling. He was aware that I was a huge fantasy enthusiast. So when I got a chance to sink my teeth into what I felt was one of the industry's leading fantasy series, I jumped at it."

LegendLore is a refreshed launch carrying on Caliber's erstwhile fantasy series The Realm.

"The title's name was changed in order to renew interest in the series," said Reed. "I knew that longtime Realm readers would follow over, but felt that maybe the 40-odd issues sort of dissuaded people who were interested in picking the series up. This was a fresh start, but with some faces and concepts familiar to the long-term readers."

The current series follows the exploits of a female elf named Silverfawn and a warrior named Dominic who is guiltridden at having been involved in the death of Silverfawn's son. But that hardly scratches the surface — there is a sizeable cast of characters who are all following paths of destiny, and it seems that this path is leading them all together.

In LegendLore #8, a precursor to "The Realm Wars" story arc, the heroes are gathered in the same room, where a mysterious mage approaches them, saying, "The months to come will prove perilous and dreadfully significant to the future of this realm." He goes on to explain that, "Each of you have trials to face. Some of you may fail. Some of you ... will die."

"We're just beginning to roll," said Martin. "Back when I was beginning to write LegendLore #1, the editor, Tim Parsons, and I sat down and brainstormed. At the end of it, I basically had a 25-issue plan. That's how epic this is. I wanted to begin gradually, then just let it snowball."

Martin revealed that his 25-issue plan will include changes to the face of A'zoth.

A new empire will be forged and the old gods will return to the realm, including the ancient fairy and dragon races.

"Everybody who writes fantasy wants to write about dragons," Martin said. "And that's definitely a focus as I go along, but I want people to bear in mind that these 25 or whatever issues is not one set storyline. I plan to meander a bit and these can be taken in separate story arcs, thus the subtitles. Somebody won't have to have read the previous Realm stuff or even the initial LegendLore story to be able to pick up 'The Realm Wars' and understand it."

Previous readers of The Realm will recall that, in issue #13, the sorcerer-king Darkoth had his true form as a black dragon divulged.

This had many readers both excited and disappointed. To their knowledge, this was the last issue of the series. And suddenly a dragon? What cruelty was this? But Reed had planned all along to relaunch The Realm, though it was up to the new creative team to handle the details. Martin and Xavier are doing just that. Martin has already plotted another arc to follow "The Realm Wars," called "Wrath of the Dragon." Ultimately, he plans to relate a lot of the ancient history of A'zoth and its repetitious, prophetic pattern.

"I want to further expand A'zoth," Martin explained. "Up to this point, The Realm has dealt with but half a continent and a few localities. I am a history fiend. I want to inject history into this land. In speaking with Tim, we want to chronicle places and things and give A'zoth a unique twist that sets it aside from the standard and archetypal fantasy world. I have plans to tell the mythical origins of the mainland of A'zoth and diagram the entire continent, as well as a lot of other stuff."

As far as archetypal fantasy goes, Martin stressed that there are enough Tolkien-esque settings as works of literature. Although he's quick to name Tolkien as one of his primary influences, he does not want to recreate another Middle Earth. "That's been done and done again too many times to count," he stressed.

"Tim Parsons, who edits LegendLore for me, really gives me a lot of input and some great ideas. LegendLore would definitely not be anywhere near what it is without his influence, and together, we really want to give Caliber's fantasy title its own unique features, its own idiosyncrasies, its own persona."

Legendlore: Realm Wars #1 is a black-and-white, 32-page comic book scheduled for release from Caliber in May.

Dragons and drubbings

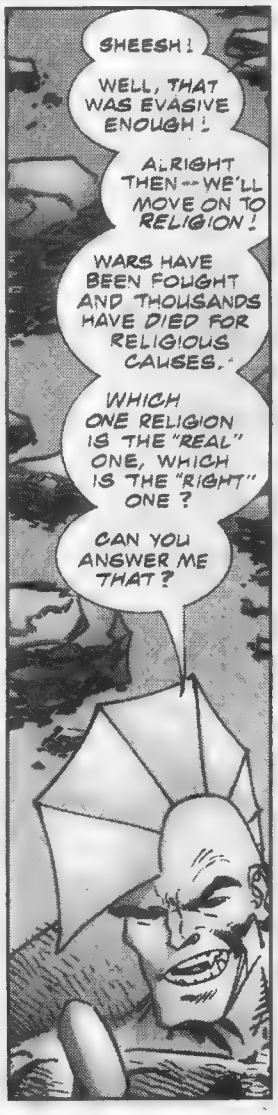
I remember picking up the first issue of Erik Larsen's Savage Dragon way back when. At the time, I was put off by the pictures of a green guy with a fin growing out of his skull. The best thing in that issue, I thought, was the nickname "fin-head."

"What we saw is Dragon's version of what a character called God would look like."
— Erik Larsen

But sometimes a spritely turned phrase is all that's needed. Hank Ketcham's Dennis the Menace was a comics feature that flew in the face of the conventional wisdom of the time: No one wanted another comic strip about a kid. But Ketcham did it anyhow, inspired by the sobriquet his wife had applied in a moment of parental ire to their young son, Dennis. And I suspect that a good deal of the feature's subsequent almost overnight success is owed to that happy phrase.

With Larsen's Dragon, popularity stems from other causes, no doubt — his leggy paramour Rapture, for one.

But for me, it's Larsen's irreverent sense of humor. Oh, sure — I like Rapture, too; but without the gleeful undercurrent that has lately infected Dragon's adventures, the book would be just another in the Image parade of Barbie doll heroines.



Who but a drawing-board comedian would get his super-powered hero all bent out of shape, as Larsen did? Dragon got broken up by a fiendish villain who then left the erstwhile hero stuffed down a factory smokestack, where he healed improperly.

Dragon has this fast-healing factor, y'remember; so, all crumpled up with his broken bones in cramped quarters of this smokestack, he healed as usual — but all the bones went back together at odd angles. When he finally emerged, bones mended, he was all akimbo, every limb and finger crooked.

You know what had to happen next. Right: All those badly bent bones had to be broken again and re-set so they'd mend properly. The medical profession, acting with an efficiency unusual in its practitioners, got Mighty Man to come into the O.R., where he pounded on The Dragon systematically, breaking every bone in his body.

This is the kind of black comedy that comes about when you take a proposition to its logical extremity. If a guy heals fast, he could heal incorrectly. And then we have to break him up again.

Larsen applies the same logic to a new crop of super-villains. What would happen, he seems to have asked himself, if the natural functions of the body were given super dimensions? Answer: it would result in a band of baddies called Body Function.

Body Function's members had superpowers described by their names. Nasal Ned flung boogers at his opponents. The Belcher burped monstrous bubbles of stomach acid. Guess what Backfire did?

And so we have the hilarious picture of the Fiend of Flatulence bending over and letting fly at Dragon and Super Patriot. I don't know how Larsen could have stopped laughing long enough to ink the picture, but he did.

The Super Patriot defeated Backfire by applying the special knowledge that males seem to acquire during adolescence about the inflammatory properties of methane gas. He lit a match and tossed it into the lingering vapors of Backfire's latest fusillade. Like a heat-seeking missile, the flame ignited the vapor trail as it followed it to its source, and then — Boom! No more Backfire.

This may be adolescent humor, but it is adolescent humor of the highest hysterical order. Irreverent. Outrageous. No question.

Larsen applied the same sort of straight-to-the-core-of-the-matter comedic logic to Rapture's visit to Dragon while the latter lay abed in the hospital, encased in a giant plaster bodycast. The relationship between the two has always been frankly sexual, and Rapture is never bashful about her needs.

Bending over the Dragon, she stared between his legs.

"Aw, baby," Dragon said, "not now."

"Just checkin' on the little fellah," she said. "I missed him, too."

In a final spasm of irreverence, Larsen arranged for a cameo appearance by God in #31. The Dragon wound up in Hell, you see, and God showed up to snatch him from the clutches of the Devil himself. God went hand-to-hand with Satan, defeated him, and then he and the Dragon engaged in philosophical dialogue.

What's the meaning of life, Dragon wanted to know.

"The answer to that lies within," God said. "There is no one answer, no right answer."

And when Fin-Head asked which religion is the "right" one, God said, "All of them and none of them are right."

Moreover, "everyone's version of God — and of Heaven — is different. And they are all correct."

This was delicious. And in case you haven't lately ventured into theocratic argumentation, it's precisely this sort of circular irrefutability that is often the specialty of the house.

Larsen pulled it off with just the right touch of respect and (in the mouth of The Dragon) wiseacre incredulity. And his explanation of this plot twist (offered in the letters pages of #33) was wonderfully matter-of-fact from a storyteller's perspective: "In comics, we're always searching to find workable concepts. Often, mythological or historical characters are introduced to further enrich the stories. By including historical characters, it ties the characters closer to reality as we know it; by including mythological characters, it unites the comic-book characters with the familiar and elevates them."

He left the question nicely open, you'll notice, as to whether God is historical or mythological. Then he went on:

"As for why I had God show up in the first place — well, it's partially because it was uncharted territory in the mainstream comic-book medium but more than that, it seemed to me that if hell existed then heaven and God had better exist, as well. Besides, I'd written myself into a corner with the Fiend/Dragon/Spawn storyline and that, if God really was everywhere and everything, then he might very well want to lend a hand [in rescuing the Dragon]. Would it have been better if God lost or if I said God didn't exist?"

As for the seeming sacrilege of God engaging in fisticuffs, it was explained by the "theology" of the sequence: Everyone's version of God is different — and correct. "What we saw," Larsen wrote, "is Dragon's version of what a 'character' called God would look and sound like. That's why he resembled Dragon facially and why he had green eyes — that's why he talked as he did."

Naturally, the sequence prompted a firestorm of comment, part of which Larsen published (and some of it he answered) in #33, which I'll leave you to find and read for yourself.

Apart from the appeal of its audacious storylines, The Savage Dragon is splendidly executed. To an extent not shared by many of his Image stablemates, Larsen makes good use of the resources of the medium. He deftly times the action in both conversation and unfolding event, creating dramatic suspense by dribbling out visual and verbal information, panel by panel by panel.

In many of the comics of other Image artists, this dramatic potential of comics is entirely overlooked in favor of more spectacular effects to be achieved through the visual crescendo of splash-page proportions. The result is that such stories, while afire with the pyrotechnics of visual display, have no variety in pacing and, hence, much less dramatic emphasis than Larsen achieves here.

Larsen also draws well. Figures are inked and shadowed for clarity of presentation. He varies close-ups with long shots. He supplies ample background visuals to set every scene. And the quality of his line is both thick and thin. Panels are clearly composed: We know where we are and whom we're looking at. And the page layouts deploy mostly regular-shaped panels, which makes them easy to follow; but Larsen changes size and pattern often enough to achieve dramatic emphasis.

The Savage Dragon may not be everything that comics can be, but it sure is a lot of fun. And that is a large part of what comics ought to be.

James S. Maxwell, Jr. Phone, E-Mail, Mail & Fax Bid Comic Book Auction May 16, 1997 Closing Date

$1.00 MINIMUM BID ON EACH LOT

Send bids to James S. Maxwell, Jr., P.O. Box 367, Lampeter, Pa 17537
717-464-5572; 717-464-5573; Fax: 717-464-5592; E-mail:lmajgin@aol.com

RULES:

1. CLOSING: Bidding closes at 8 P.M. E.S.T., Friday, May 16, 1997 on all lots on which the bid is $20 or under. On lots on which the bid is $21 or more, the auction will continue by phone, e-mail and fax after 8 P.M. until 15 minutes goes by without a call. After 8 P.M. bidding will be restricted to those bidders who have bid prior to 8 P.M. on May 16 on any lot.
2. PHONE BIDS: You may call as many times as you want prior to and on the closing days of the auction to check the status of the high bids on any items you are interested in. When you call, we will tell you the current high bid & whether or not you are holding the high bid. You may then choose to raise the bid a minimum of 10% over current high bid or pass & not raise the bid. All bids will be rounded off to the next highest dollar. No partial dollar bids will be accepted. We will accept calls from 10 A.M. Eastern Standard Time & onward through the night on the closing day of auction. On the closing night the phone lines will be open until a period of 15 minutes passes without a call. The phones are working & in good order, so please keep trying to get through.
3. Please bid by mail, e-mail, fax or phone in even dollar amounts. Any partial dollar bids will be rounded to the next highest dollar. We reserve the right to refuse any bid(s) for any reason.
4. MAIL BIDS: Please try to send mail bids at least one week prior to closing to insure arrival. Bidding by fax is, of course, immediate, but be sure to verify receipt of fax to avoid disappointment. Earliest bid wins tie. Please print your name, address, & phone number clearly on your bid sheet.
5. E-MAIL BIDS: Bids are accepted by e-mail with the stipulation that the bidder must have registered with us in order to bid. On the final day of the auction, I will do my best to check e-mail for bids. However, phone bidding takes priority over e-mail bids & it is up to the bidder to ascertain that their bids have been received in time to be accepted which would be best done by phone or fax, not e-mail. If you do not receive confirmation by e-mail that your bids have been accepted, do not assume that your bids arrived by closing. Occasional updates will be provided by e-mail or fax at your request.
6. You may bid on as many comics as you like & limit your total purchases to any dollar amount you desire, but this amount must be clearly specified on your bid sheet. Otherwise you are obligated to pay for all comics on which your bids were successful.
7. CONDITION REPORTS: All questions regarding condition must be asked prior to the closing date of the auction. Grading is according to the guidelines of Overstreet Comic Book Grading Guide.
8. It is our intention to sell every lot so we are listing them all at a staring bid of $1. Every lot which has a bid of $1 or more will be sold.
9. In the event of an emergency, we reserve the right to change the closing date of the auction
10. RETURNS must be verified by phone & returned in the same condition as received, fully insured & postmarked within 3 days of receipt to qualify for a refund. Returns will not be accepted on comics graded below VG and/or selling for under $20 each nor on items on which bidders have paid their bills later than 2 weeks after the closing date of the auction.
11. PA residents must pay 6% sales tax or provide a valid resale number.
12. Postage, packing & insurance will be billed at $5 minimum per order plus $1 per $100 over first $100 total of purchase. Heavy parcels & multiple comics to any destination & lots to Canada or any foreign shipments will be billed at our approximate cost of First Class & Insurance. Immediate shipment on receipt of certified check or money order Personal checks are ok but allow 10 days to 2 weeks to clear prior to shipment.
13. Note: Be sure that you are bidding by lot number and not by the issue number of the comic. The lot numbers are all in bold type.
14. The placing of bids in this auction will constitute acceptance of the terms listed in 1 through 14. If you cannot accept these rules, please do not bid. Thank you!

Walt Disney's Comics & Stories

1 #1 V 1 Oct. 1940 opening issue. Has slightest beginning of spine roll, small chip 3/8" long by 1/8" to 1/4" wide at a point 3/4" down from top right front corner, several 1/16" tears at borders, 3/8" tear at bottom border, small lightly penciled arrival date over "A" & "L" of "Walt" on cover, some stress lines & a few tears at spine, overall cover has many subtle bends but few break the fiber of the paper, two interior pages have tears but nothing missing, back cover has 1 1/2" long crease at corners & 3/16" tear by crease, intenor pages fairly supple with only light browning, staples bright & shiny & unoxidized, excellent to superb cover gloss. Except for the tiny chip at front edge I would grade G+/VG & it is a very appealing example for the grade. We will gladly provide any additional description you may desire on this or any other comic in the auction if you wish to give us a phone call.

Sotheby's to hold expanded comics auction

At right (clockwise from top left): Golden Age artist Harry Lampert re-created the art for the 16-page Flash origin story; Mort Meskin's original art for the cover of Tales of the Unexpected #10; and the original cover art and an interior page from Fantastic Four #93 by Jack Kirby and Frank Giacoia.

Sotheby's seventh comic-book and comics-art auction has expanded to cover two days, June 13 and 14, with a Los Angeles preview scheduled for June 4-6 and a New York preview scheduled for June 10-13.

Sotheby's comics auction has been growing all year, and there are many last-minute consignments that will be offered to collectors. The major offerings in this auction are complete hundred-issue runs, from #1-100, of Superman, Batman, Action Comics, World's Finest, and several other Golden Age titles.

The latest additions to the auction include the Lamont Larson copies of Marvel Comics #1 and Marvel Mystery Comics #2-4. The Mile High copies of Blue Beetle #1-5 and Daredevil #1 and #2 are also part of a large last-minute consignment. This same collection included a copy of Detective Comics #27 in unrestored Fine condition. An institutional collection of unrestored comic books including Superman #1-23, Batman #2-16, runs of Wonderworld Comics and Fantastic Comics, both beginning with #3, have been consigned.

This year's auction includes more than 600 lots of comic books and comic-book art. The catalog will be ready to mail nearly a month before the auction date and can be ordered in advance by calling Sotheby's subscriptions at (800) 444-3709.

Golden Age artist Harry Lampert has re-created the original art for a Golden Age Flash story. This re-creation story represents the first time that a Golden Age artist has actually redrawn and inked an entire origin story.

Other last-minute consignments include more than 20 pages of such vintage Jack Kirby material as early pages from Avengers #2 and #3 and Hulk #3, along with the cover to Fantastic Four #23 and the complete 20-page story, "At the Mercy of Torgo!," inked by Frank Giacoia. There are pre-hero splash pages by Steve Ditko, early pages from Amazing Spider-Man #6 and #9, and the cover for Batman Comics #189 by Carmine Infantino and Giella.

Newspaper comic-strip art this year includes Sunday pages by E.C. Segar, Alex Raymond, Harold Foster, and Burne Hogarth. The Walt Kelly Sunday strip for Pogo dated 10-26-52 also has completed drawings for an unpublished concept for a new strip idea on the reverse side. There is also a Charles Schulz Peanuts daily from November 1950, the second month of the strip's existence.

Sotheby's has received some Mint early editions of Zap, Lenny of Laredo, S. Clay Wilson's Looseleaf Portfolio, and other early underground comics from the personal file-copy collection of Alice and Don Schenker of The Print Mint. The section also has color original art by Robert Crumb from his original covers for Blue Goose/Yazoo Records. More than 10 album covers are offered for sale, along with some of the black-and-white illustrations that Crumb did for this company. Rounding out this section are hand-picked originals from the collection of Jay Rogers, including color works by Vaughn Bodé, Kim Deitch, and Rick Griffin.

For specific questions about the auction, call Dana Hawkes at (212) 606-7910 or Jerry Weist at (212) 606-7862.

Brent Anderson has a story that's taken 20 years to spin

By Tom Fassbender

Brent Anderson, best known as the artist on Kurt Busiek's Astro City, has been drawing comics professionally for more than 20 years. He's worked on such titles as Dr. Strange, Battlestar Galactica, Ka-Zar the Savage, Strikeforce: Morituri, and the X-Men: God Loves, Man Kills graphic novel. Despite these achievements, there is still a title he has yet to publish: Spinworld, a pet project he said is only six months younger than his entire professional career. Now, with the help of Slave Labor Graphics, he is on the brink of fulfilling this career-spanning goal.

Spinworld is based on Spacing Dutchman, a novella about a giant Earth-orbiting space station/arcology known as the Spacing Dutchman that becomes the backdrop for political intrigue and adventure. The original story was written by the speculative-fiction writing team of Eric Vinicoff and Marcia Martin. Until recently, Spinworld retained the Spacing Dutchman title, but Anderson felt it had to be changed.

"Spacing Dutchman doesn't stay in anybody's memory or trip off anyone's tongue easily," he explained. "I wanted to call it Spin City, but then Michael J. Fox came out with his new TV series. I was hoping the show would be in the toilet by January, so we could use the title, but it doesn't look like that's going to happen. So the next logical choice was to call the comic book Spinworld."

During the past 20 years, Spinworld has been an ever-present entity in Anderson's life. "It's been a neverending series of excitements and disappointments that has reflected the way I was feeling throughout my career as a comic-book artist," Anderson said.

It started in 1976, when Anderson was approached by Vinicoff to do the interior illustrations for his home-published, digest-sized novella of the original Spacing Dutchman story. "He had seen some samples of my work at an art show," Anderson said. "He needed six spot illustrations for the inside and, based on the art he'd seen at the show, contacted me to do them. He also hired Frank Brunner as the cover artist. I thought I should have done the cover, but Frank Brunner was a name and I wasn't."

In the wake of this experience, Anderson set off for New York to make a name for himself. "I took sample pages to New York; in those days, you had to go directly to the publishers' offices to get a job in comics. I worked for about six months doing spot illustrations here and there," Anderson remembers. "I even did a five-page back-up story featuring Angel from The X-Men that didn't see print until after I had left."

The biggest project he did during this period was never published. It was a 17-page Master of Kung Fu episode that he plotted and penciled. "It was a 'get Shang-Chi through the deadly maze of death' story," he said. "Paul Gulacy was leaving Master of Kung Fu. I was a big Bruce Lee fan and I really wanted to draw that book. Archie Goodwin thought my work was good enough, but he didn't want to try out a new guy who had no track record for meeting a monthly deadline on an established title that was selling reasonably well."

This brought Anderson to the realization that he wasn't able to draw fast enough to meet monthly deadlines, and he returned to California. "I came back home an abject failure," he recollected. "I spent about eight months moping around feeling sorry for myself. Then Neal Adams called me and gave me a pep talk over the phone, which greatly improved my attitude. And Star Wars came out; that really boosted my spirits. I stopped feeling sorry for myself after I saw that movie. I couldn't help but be inspired by something that original and creative."

About the same time, Mike Friederich approached Vinicoff with an offer to publish the Spacing Dutchman story as a comic book through Star*Reach, Friederich's alternative comic-book company. Vinicoff was enthusiastic about the project and suggested Anderson as the ideal artist to draw the story. It was originally slated to be a 32-page issue of *Star*Reach*, but when Friederich started publishing Imagine, there was talk of it appearing in that comic book in an expanded, 48-page version.

Vinicoff had written a 32-page comics script — in longhand — and Friederich felt that it would be good to flesh out the story a little more. Everything was progressing nicely, when, because of financial concerns, Star*Reach suddenly ceased publication of all its titles. Friederich however, had promised Vinicoff that he would find a way to get the story published. He pounded the pavement and found a new home for Spacing Dutchman at Fantagraphics.

That took place in 1978. In 1979, Anderson was ready to give his career as a comic-book artist another go and returned to New York. This time he got work almost immediately. He worked on fill-in issues of Dr. Strange and Battlestar Galactica before being assigned to his first regular monthly comic book, Ka-Zar the Savage, with writer Bruce Jones.

During this time, Anderson met Fantagraphics Publisher Gary Groth during a visit to Adams at his Continuity studio. Anderson mentioned to Groth his enthusiasm for the Spacing Dutchman project and its new home with Fantagraphics. Anderson, however, received a different impression from Groth. "He seemed very disinterested," Anderson said. "It felt like he was doing it as a favor for Mike. So I decided that it would be better if I published the series with someone else, or I just didn't publish it at all."

The latter choice wasn't really an option. By this time, Anderson had already completed 32 of the story's 48 pages, in both pencil and ink. The project was too far along for him to walk away. Luckily, Adams showed an interest in the project and gave it its third home, at Continuity.

After working on Ka-Zar the Savage for nearly 20 issues, Anderson was about to move on, and it seemed like an ideal time for him to finish Spacing Dutchman — until a conflict arose. He was offered a job working on the Marvel graphic novel X-Men: God Loves, Man Kills. "After Ka-Zar, I had to make a decision between working on Spacing Dutchman or doing X-Men: God Loves, Man Kills," Anderson recalls. "I thought the opportunity for doing God Loves, Man Kills was something I probably shouldn't have passed up, and I'm glad I didn't. But it put Spacing Dutchman on hiatus for awhile."

Needless to say, this made the future of Spacing Dutchman at Continuity somewhat bleak. "As one project led to another, and my career began heading off in directions other than the Dutchman, Neal grew concerned," said Anderson. "He contacted me and told me we had to come to an agreement on whether or not he would publish the comic book. So by mutual agreement, we decided to cancel the contract, and I was free to use or not use the Dutchman again."

The title didn't remain in limbo for long, if at all. Even before Anderson canceled the contract with Continuity, Dick Giordano became interested in the project and brought it to DC Comics. With this interest known, Anderson felt secure enough to buy out the contract from Continuity and sign a new publishing deal at DC. This was during the days of the prestige format boom, and, consequently, Spacing Dutchman changed from a single 48-page issue into a much larger, more ambitious work. "I was supposed to produce what turned out to be 137 pages, plus covers, of full-color artwork in a year," Anderson said. "I thought I could do it but I got so engrossed in the story and the drawing that it actually took me two years to complete the black-and-white line art alone."

Part of the trouble was that this was completely different art from the work he had done for either Star*Reach or Continuity. While the series was at Continuity, he had re-drawn the original 32 pages and an additional 16 pages that had been added at

Friederich's suggestion. After the series settled at DC, these 48 pages were expanded again, this time to a page count of 62. In addition, two more Vinicoff/Martin short stories, both with the Spacing Dutchman as a backdrop, were added. One, "The Snake and the Staff," was added before the original Spacing Dutchman story, and the other, "The Politics of Plenty," was added after, turning what was once a single issue into a triptych of stories, each relating in some manner to the Spacing Dutchman space station.

"The Spacing Dutchman story is really just a spy adventure with a Modesty Blaise type and a James Bond type who team up to fight the bad guy looking for the MacGuffin," Anderson said. "It's not real deep, but it's a lot of fun — mainly because I like the characters. And that's the main reason why I wanted to include the other two stories, to bracket that story. 'The Snake and the Staff' is a romance, while the follow-up story, 'The Politics of Plenty,' gets into deep characterization and global politics. Together, these added some depth to both ends of the original adventure story. There's not a whole lot of character depth in Spacing Dutchman. I felt the new stories were needed, because I was growing and getting more mature in my tastes and needed more than just an adventure story."

Once again, however, fate conspired against publication of the Spacing Dutchman. After two years, DC, which had invested a substantial sum of money in increasing the length of the story and getting the script and the black-and-white art finished, removed the series from its publishing timetable. "They looked at the way the industry was headed and decided there was no way they could break even, let alone make money, on a project like Spacing Dutchman," Anderson said. "Plus, the champion for the series, Dick Giordano, had retired from DC."

The Amaze Ink/Knee Deep edition of Spinworld is much like its DC predecessor, except it will be published as a four-issue series in black and white. The first three issues will be 32 pages, while the fourth issue weighs in at 48 pages. Chuck Austen, one-time Slave Labor freelancer and co-creator of one of Slave Labor's flagship titles, Hero Sandwich, will provide graytones, and Kevin Cunningham, who has been attached to the series since its tenure at DC, will letter it. The rest of the work will be handled by Vinicoff and Anderson. The first story,

Another of Anderson's illustrations from the Spacing Dutchman novella.

"The Snake and the Staff," scripted by Vinicoff, comprises the first issue and sets up some of the action that occurs later in the series. The second story, "Spacing Dutchman," the original piece that started it all, spans the second and third issues. The third story, "The Politics of Plenty," which Anderson adapted and scripted, makes up the fourth issue and deals with the socio-political aftermath of the events in the "Spacing Dutchman" story.

Anderson, who is also working on an alternate-history novel set during the Civil War, said that Vinicoff is ready to tackle more Spacing Dutchman stories, if the series is successful. "In 20 years, many of the really cool ideas Eric came up with in the story have all been done now or they've become a reality," Anderson said. "I guess I waited too long to get this book out, and it's become a retro comic."

He's willing to wait a little longer though, before committing to any more tales from the Spacing Dutchman "universe." First, he's interested in seeing what the reaction will be to a self-published comic book from Knee Deep Productions.

Anderson said, "Spinworld seems like a living thing that sort of took over my life for 20 years, and it's finally come to the point where it's going to be born this year. It could be a complete flop, but I don't have any control over that anymore. All I can do is get it published in as nice-looking a form as I possibly can and just see what happens. I'm very excited to see it in print."

After waiting more than 20 years, dealing with five publishers, and drawing more than 200 comic-book pages, Brent Anderson will finally reach the end of this long, strange journey.

Comics MIA

We have received confirmation that the following titles listed in previous MIA sections have shipped:

Best of Dizzy Dames #1 from ACG; Naughty Bits #20 and 21 from Fantagraphics; and Bad Apples #1 and China & Jazz: Code Name Double Impact #2 from High Impact. This reflects shipping information received through April 25. Our thanks to everyone who called or wrote with updates.

The following comics were scheduled to ship approximately 30 or more days ago; however, we have not been able to confirm that they have actually been released, nor, as far as we have been able to determine, have they been rescheduled. If you have any of the issues listed below, please let us know. We'd especially appreciate it if you could include the information we need to list the comic book in the CBG Price Guide. From the indicia of the comic book: The full title, issue number, month, and year, as well as the U.S. price given on the cover.

SUPER TRADERS

Super Trader ads are available for $108.00 each. Super Traders are designed by the advertiser on 8-1/2" x 8-1/2" paper. We reduce the ad to 5" x 5" size. Super Trader ads are a low cost form of advertising. Because of this, CBG does not typeset, screen photos, add logos, artwork or credit card symbols to Super Trader ads.

TRADERS

Trader ads are available for $40.00 each. Traders are designed by the advertiser on 8-1/2" x 8-1/2" paper. We reduce the ad to 3-1/4" x 3-1/4" size. Trader ads are a low cost form of advertising. Because of this, CBG does not typeset, screen photos, add logos, artwork or credit card symbols to Trader ads.

TRADERS

Trader ads are available for $40.00 each. Traders are designed by the advertiser on 8-1/2" x 8-1/2" paper. We reduce the ad to 3-1/4" x 3-1/4" size. Trader ads are a low cost form of advertising. Because of this, CBG does not typeset, screen photos, add logos, artwork or credit card symbols to Trader ads.

TRADERS

Trader ads are available for $40.00 each. Traders are designed by the advertiser on 8-1/2" x 8-1/2" paper. We reduce the ad to 3-1/4" x 3-1/4" size. Trader ads are a low cost form of advertising. Because of this, CBG does not typeset, screen photos, add logos, artwork or credit card symbols to Trader ads.

Trader Tips

The Trader ads in CBG are an easy and economical way to advertise. Simply design your ad in a space that is 8½" wide by 8½" high and send it along with payment ($40.00 per Trader space) and complete reference form to:

COMICS BUYER'S GUIDE
Advertising Department
700 E. State Street
Iola, WI 54990-0001

We'll reduce your ad to the proper size and place it in the issue(s) you request. If no specific issue(s) is requested, we'll run your ad in the next available issue.

Keep in mind that CBG does not typeset, screen photos, add logos, artwork or symbols to Trader ads. The better your ad looks when you send it to us, the better it will look when it is reduced and published in CBG.

TRADERS

Trader ads are available for $40.00 each. Traders are designed by the advertiser on 8-1/2" x 8-1/2" paper. We reduce the ad to 3-1/4" x 3-1/4" size. Trader ads are a low cost form of advertising. Because of this, CBG does not typeset, screen photos, add logos, artwork or credit card symbols to Trader ads.

ORIGINAL COMIC ART

Alfred Andriola - Kerry Drake daily strip, 11/17/49. These are hard to come by. Drake is involved in a car chase with the villain Bear-Face. Good shot of KD in first panel which is the only one he appears in. Other three detail car chase. Autographed by a Fred Surace. - Was $300.00, now only $250.00

Bernard Chang - Dr. Mirage #5, Page 9 (Valiant Comics). Page consists of three big panels featuring character. A must for Chang fans! Autographed as well - Was $75.00, now only $50.00

Billy DeBeck - Barney Google 6/17/32 daily strip. Features Google and Sully in 2 out of 4 panels. Barney coaches Sully on his wrestling moves. The house detective comes up to tell them to knock off the racket and becomes Sully's unwilling wrestling partner. Fun-eee! - $500.00

Eastman & Laird - "Stompers" from TMNT #???. Pages #1, 2, 3, 4 All four pages used in the printing of that issue. Not the original art, but these pages have been touched up and craft-tinted. Each page has been signed at the bottom by Eastman and Laird. Laird's signature is illegible. Page one has a TMNT head drawn by each next to their signature, page two has one TMNT head and 3&4 have just signatures. These pages are worth it just for the autographs alone - All four as a set for $25.00.

Sam Glanzman - Kona #17 Cover art. Soldiers riding a Triceratops and a T-Rex attack Kona and his military pals Large size 60s art. Unsigned. - $400.00

Sam Glanzman - King Arthur kneeling with sword, hand-colored (by Glanzman) Photostat on comic book paper.. Size is 11-1/2 x 17-1/2, image area is 11 x 15. This would look great framed. - $20.00

Bob Hall - Shadowman specialty drawing. Head shot. Size is 11" x 14-1/4," image area is 9" x 11." Done in 1993 and personally inscribed to yours truly. A very nice piece for fans of Shadowman. - $40.00

MISCELLANEOUS

Batman: The Dark Knight 3-D Stand-Up - Promotional stand-up sent to comic stores to promote the original Dark Knight mini-series. Frank Miller's Dark Knight stands ready to punch it out. Few infinitely minor defects. Minuscule white spot on boot top. Cardboard backer has come off due to age of glue. Stand-up itself in fantastic shape. Call it VG++ - Was $100.00, now only $75.00 or best offer.

Image Limited Edition Watch - Limited edition, given out to friends of Image a couple of years back. Watch face has silver "I" with blue background. Comes in small pine box with sliding lid. Back of watch is engraved with the words "Limited Edition." - Was $40.00, now only $25.00.

Penguin For Mayor Poster - Original unused movie prop! This is a never used copy of the COBBLEPOT FOR MAYOR campaign poster featuring The Penguin w/Umbrella that was plastered all over the place in the movie Batman Returns This huge full color poster measures approx. 30" x 58' and has a ¾" tear under the word MAYOR at the bottom. This could easily be repaired or simply covered up if the poster is framed. Poster is rolled and will be shipped in heavy cardboard tube - Was $125.00, now only $75.00

Rogue Statue - Produced by Creative License, this cold-cast porcelain statue features the popular X-Men heroine. Never opened, comes in sealed display box - Was $125.00, now only $100.00. This retails for over $150.00!!!

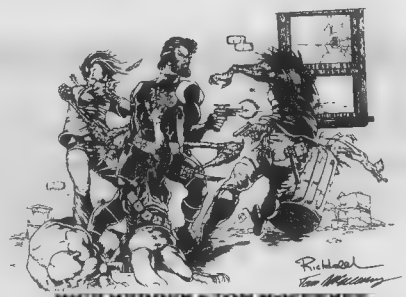
PLATINUM SPIDER-MAN #1 - Yes collectors, its the holy grail. The platinum edition of Todd McFarlane's Spider-Man #1. A truly incredible collector's item. We'll call the condition Near Mint as mint should only be used to describe a flavor of gum. Bagged and boarded, for an additional fee will ship between sheets of steel in a hermetically sealed container that can only be opened with the proper DNA sample. Let's not quibble over the price of this item as what is money but merely green paper and ink. Don't miss out on this once-in-a- lifetime opportunity to own this premier collectable by the legendary Todd McFarlane. It's a page right out of history! - $295.00

SHEL-TONE

R.CRUMB: THE MUSICAL COMPACT DISC - This compact disc features recordings from the Hip Pocket Theatre of Fort Worth, Texas' production of the mid-1980s, based on the underground comics of Robert Crumb! Approved by Crumb, this CD features 60 solid minutes of good-timey tunes plus a comprehensive 8-page booklet detailing the production and Crumb's involvement with it. A couple of unpublished pieces of Crumb artwork done for the production, as well as photos from the musical are included as well. The booklet will also have a color cover featuring Crumb art and a striking photo of the cast. A must-have item for all Crumb-o-philes! Price: $15.95 + $2.00 P&H

PAGE PIX: BETTY PAGE TRADING CARD SET in FULL COLOR!!! - YOW! ARE YOU READY FOR BETTY? She was (and is) the dream girl of many men, boys and even a number of women, with her girl-next-door good looks and her vivacious personality that seemed to literally jump right out of her photographs. Shel-Tone Publications proudly offers this full-color trading card set, devoted to the legendary pin-up queen of the 1950's and 1960's, BETTY PAGE! This set is culled from a series of rare full-color slides taken by an obscure photographer (who actually dated Betty!). This trading card set constitutes the material's first appearance in glorious full-color and is a must have item for any Betty fan!. PAGE PIX features 36 full-color cards in an illustrated box. The backs of the cards feature facts about Betty that will be of interest to her fans everywhere! Less than half the print run remains. Don't delay, order today! Due to some nudity, an age statement is required with all orders. Adult Collectors Only! Price: $9.95 + $2.00 P&H

ZOT! #10 cover artwork. Head is a stat, but another is under it - $225.00



ROACHMILL Specialty Drawing. Size is 20 x 15 on illustration board - $150.00

ALFRED ANDRIOLA Kerry Drake daily strip, 11/17/49 - autographed by a Fred Surace. Was $300.00, now only $250.00!

BILLY DEBECK Barney Google 6/17/32 daily strip. $500.00

Rich Hedden & Tom McWeeney - Roachmill specialty drawing done for a charity auction. Roachmill takes out four baddies single, no, make that quadruple-handed. Done on illustration board, the piece measures 20" x 15." Signed by both creators, this has to be the ultimate original for any fan of the series - $150.00

Don Lomax - "The Legacy of Laura Cole," complete four-page extremely adults-only story which probably appeared in a men's magazine back in the 1980s. Due to the erotic nature, this can be sold to Adults Only! - $100.00.

Scott McCloud - ZOT! #10 cover artwork. 13" x 18-1/2." Zot's head is a stat, but another head is under it for those adventurous enough to peel it off. Nonetheless, a nice cover and how much of McCloud's art do you see offered for sale? - $225.00

Timothy Truman - Scout: War Shaman #10, page 10. Personally inscribed to yours truly - $75.00
Hawkworld #3, Page 20. Original Miniseries, signed by Truman - $100.00

Urosukidoji Animation Cel - Actual prodiction cel used in the making of the anime' classic, Urotsukidoji: Legend of the Overfiend. Not familiar with the characters, but would assume this to be the Overfiend himself. Painted cel, no background. Comes with Certificate of Authenticity. Excellent condition! - Was $150.00, now only $100.00

PORTFOLIOS

Clive Barker - Books Of Blood Portfolio, limited to 1,000 copies. Published in 1988, six of these illustrations were originally created by Clive Barker as dust jackets for the British editions of the Books of Blood published in 1985. The six color plates measure a large 14-1/2" x 20." The image area is 12-1/2 x 17," printed by offset lithography scanned by laser directly from the originals. Each of the six prints has been signed by Clive Barker. In addition there is a seventh black & white print done exclusively for this portfolio combining art and prose by Clive. Published by Arcane Prints of Washington, DC., the prints come in a large gray envelope. This is an exceptional item and a must for any Clive Barker fan! - $200.00

Robert Williams - Cartoon Surrealism, portfolio of ten color plates, limited to 4,000 numbered copies. Featuring full color reproductions of ten of this master's paintings which sell for thousands of dollars apiece. This is as close as most of us will ever come to one. This copy is a publisher's sample, identical in every way, but not numbered. The original portfolio sold for $300.00. Was $175.00, now only $125.00.

JERRY SIEGEL SIGNED COMICS

Superman #75 from 1993, signed by Jerry Siegel, the co-creator of Superman. This Dynamic Forces edition comes in a wooden box and is limited to 1,250 copies. This is #68. The certificate of authenticity is a metal plate attached to the box lid. This is an incredible presentation - Was $200.00, now only $150.00 or best offer.
Superman #1 from 1987, signed by Jerry Siegel. Matted (blue) and framed (black), this edition was limited to 500 copies of which this was #340. Produced by The Score Board. Comes with certificate of authenticity - Was $150.00, now only $125.00 or best offer.

TRADERS

Trader ads are available for $40.00 each. Traders are designed by the advertiser on 8-1/2" x 8-1/2" paper. We reduce the ad to 3-1/4" x 3-1/4" size. Trader ads are a low cost form of advertising. Because of this, CBG does not typeset, screen photos, add logos, artwork or credit card symbols to Trader ads.

But I Digress

this, however, was my willingness to accept this life. In taking on such a life, every gain is a loss. To put yourself in the line of fire means no entanglements. No family, no friends, no close ties of any consequence. They all become targets. They are merely steps to get to you."

Kent thought of his attraction to Lois. Would that be denied him once his own quest began? Savage continued, "My five associates are trained for this life. Other friends have been murdered. My father was murdered. I cannot seek revenge. This is not part of my code. My code is set and I cannot change it. I have not taken another life.

"I know of a fellow crimefighter here in the city. He is not as open as I am. He works in the shadows and feels no compunction for the taking of human life. I don't condone but I'm in no position to stop him. That is his code. Revenge is not the basis of my operations. I work for the common good. It is not a life to be rushed into. You must consider all the options, good as well as bad. Once you begin to travel down this road, there is no turning back. Don't you believe all that stuff in those dime novels. If they had their way, they'd have me leaping off tall buildings."

Kent smiled.

The advertisers' index is provided as a reader service. Occasional last minute changes may result in ads appearing on pages other than those listed here. The publisher assumes no liability for omissions or errors.

GENERAL INFORMATION

A. PAYMENT: Ads must be accompanied by payment. You may pay with a check, money order, or credit card.

B. CREDIT CARDS: We will accept the following credit cards: VISA, MasterCard, American Express, Discover.

C. DEADLINE: For all advertising is 4:00 p.m. each Tuesday, unless otherwise stated on deadline card.

D. TERMS: Cash with copy only. All advertisers must provide information for the confidential use of the publisher should questions arise.

E. CONTRACT RATES are available for 6, 13, 26, or 52 consecutive issues. Contract rates apply to fulfillment of contract items. Cancellation of a contract by the advertiser allows the publisher to reinvoice covered ads at the earned rate. This rate card is a part of the advertising contract.

F. MINORS are required to furnish a statement of responsibility from their parent or guardian before their advertising can be accepted.

G. ERRORS: Typewritten copy is recommended. The publisher is not responsible for errors resulting from longhand or illegible copy, or changes submitted by telephone. The publisher's liability for any error shall not exceed the cost of the space occupied by that error.

H. LAYOUT and design services are provided by Krause Publications for advertisers who do not submit camera-ready copy. Due to the creative and subjective nature of these services, credit will not be allowed for conceptual variations.

I. GRADING: Items offered in any ad must be properly described as to condition, conforming to the standards set forth in Comics Buyer's Guide Price Guide. Advertisers may also exercise the option of grading offerings by applying a unique personal system, providing the standards applied are detailed in the ad to avoid confusion.

J. RETURN PRIVILEGE: Except as otherwise specified in any ad, an advertiser must accept the return of any merchandise postmarked within ten working days of its receipt by a customer.

K. P.O. BOX ADS are allowed, but the permanent home address, phone number and place of business of the advertiser must be filed with the publisher before advertisements may be printed.

L. SPECIAL PAGE POSITIONS are available at a premium, inquire for details.

M. ADVERTISING AGENCIES: There are no agency discounts.

N. CAMERA READY display ads qualify for a 15% discount. Copy must be ready for camera without additional paste-up or film work required. No charge for reproductions, enlargements or mail response key change. Classified Display, Comics Trader, Collector's Showcase and classified word ads do not qualify for the camera ready discount.

O. SPACE RESERVATIONS available for camera ready ads only. Must be made prior to ad deadline. Reserved space must be paid for even if ad does not arrive on time.

P. PRE-PRINTED INSERTS are available in Comics Buyer's Guide. Inquire for additional information and technical specifications.

Q. CIRCULATION is throughout the United States and Canada by subscription and single copy sales by agents in shops and other outlets.

R. PROOF OF PUBLICATION: Tear sheets of new display ads are mailed to those advertisers requesting this service. We regret we cannot provide this service to classified advertisers.

S. NOTE: All advertising orders are accepted subject to the terms and provisions of the current rate card. Krause Publications, Inc. reserves the right to decline advertising or suspend advertising privileges for such periods of time as in its discretion it sees fit, for any reason, whatsoever, irrespective of the validity of the reasons for such declination or suspension. The forwarding of an order is construed as acceptance of all rates and conditions in effect at the time the advertising is submitted. The publisher will not be bound by any conditions, printed or otherwise, appearing on any order for advertising space, billing instructions or copy instructions which conflict with its policies. Advertisers and advertising agencies assume liability for all content (including text representation and illustrations) of advertisements printed, and also assumes responsibility of any claims arising therefrom made against the publisher. It is the advertiser's or agency's responsibility to obtain appropriate releases on any item or individual pictured in their advertising. All agreements are subject to strikes, accidents, acts of God, or other contingencies beyond the publisher's control. The publisher reserves the right to edit any advertising copy to conform with its standard advertising policies, and to reject any ad which in its opinion is unethical or objectional for any reason.

Just to be utterly different, I've decided that, even though I'll be running the concluding installment of our little Who Fights Whom/Amalgam contest next week, I'm going to run the winning entry this week. Why? Because it showed a staggering amount of initiative. Because the entrant created not only a statue, but the beginnings of an entire story to accompany it, and because — most important of all — the entrant didn't put his name and address on the story. And the problem is that, when the entry gets separated from the cover letter — like now, for instance — it means we can't give proper freakin' credit.

So we eagerly look forward to hearing from the creator of — Doc Savage Dragon — who also was gung-ho enough to write the attached opening chapters of his own vision of a megacrossover (and fella, when you write in to identify yourself, be sure to tell us what was written in marker on the binder, so we know it's you.)

Herewith, the opening chapters of a crossover by — some guy.

Man of Steel

A visit from a couple of strangers leads The Man of Bronze into one of his most perplexing adventures. Is this stranger only a curious reporter, or is he a strange visitor who represents the shape of things to come?

Chapter 1
"The Tourists"

New York. The easiest way to spot tourists visiting the world's busiest city is to watch for the people standing on the street corners looking straight up and gawking. When the tallest thing you've seen in your life is a grain elevator, a skyscraper is a modern miracle. Even now, more than 20 years following the Great War, something as simple as a tower of granite and steel was a source of amazement. The two out-of-towners that hurried down the busy street were not of the usual variety. Reporters don't think of themselves as anything other than reporters.

"Clark, slow down. Where's the fire, besides in your eyes?"

This remark either didn't register or was overlooked by her male companion. The companion was a tall, brick house of a man, dressed in a dark blue suit that looked to have walked out a suit advertisement. His companion was a modern model of female pulchritude. "Lois," the man eventually replied, "if we don't track this Savage character down today, Mr. White will have our necks. And make us pay back the cost of the train tickets, to boot."

"Oh Clark, don't tell me you believe those stories and all that 'Man of Bronze' malarkey. Honestly, your hayseeds are showing." Lois Lane was struck by Clark's serious tone since they had taken this assignment. She had met him only recently since he began working on the Daily Planet. But since this assignment had called for an interview with Doc Savage, the living legend of pulp headlines and tabloid fodder, Clark had insisted on talking with the adventurer. His determination at this puzzled her. Lois hated puzzles.

The meeting was set for noon. The fact that they were getting an actual interview was a miracle in itself. The bronze knight was an enigma. Most news stories carried the same information that had been repeated time and again. New information on the famous Doc Savage was as scarce as honest politicians.

The tallest of the skyscrapers was the bronze man's headquarters. High above the teeming streets below, in the offices on the 86th floor, Lois Lane and Clark Kent arrived in a reception room. There they were greeted by one of the bronze man's assistants. Lieutenant Colonel Andrew Blodgett Mayfair was a man of many talents. Industrial chemist, adventurer, and missing-link possibility were among his claims of fame. Charm was one of his foremost.

His eyes were immediately caught by Lois Lane's charms, of which there were many. If she was with someone else, Monk hadn't noticed. "Monk Mayfair at your service, and any service I can provide I will provide with a smile.

"Why, thank you Mr. Mayfair," said Lois, playing along with Monk's approach. No matter where they are, men are men. No matter what they look like, they all think they have the appeal of Clark Gable and John D. Rockefeller.

"Say, ain't you in pictures? I'm sure someone as beautiful as you would knock them dead on Broadway."

"Why no, Mr. Mayfair, I'm Lois Lane, and this is Clark Kent," Lois replied. "We're reporters from Metropolis. We're here for an interview with Mr. Savage But I'm sure I've seen you in the movies."

"When was this?" Monk asked, his chest puffing up in pride. "In a newsreel of important chemical breakthroughs or my great adventures?"

"I'm not sure," Lois replied, "but I think that airplanes were trying to shoot you down."

Getting the air was nothing new for Monk. "I'll check with Doc and make sure everything's jake. Have a seat." Monk slunk out of the room.

Chapter 2
"Take My Life, Please —"

Clark Savage entered the room. The room grew remarkably smaller. Such was the presence of the bronze Goliath. It is commonly believed that women mature much sooner than men. It is a fact that Lois Lane matured much sooner than most women. So the fact that Lois suddenly felt like a teen-ager in the bronze man's presence was to later embarrass her. However, this was now. Kent, on the other hand, was altogether different. He was like an unruly juvenile being met by the school principal.

"Mr. Savage, I'm Kent from the Daily Planet." Kent had risen and held out his hand to the bronze man.

"Clark, please," replied Doc Savage.

"Clark, please what ?" replied the nervous Kent. Before he realized what he had said, it was too late.

They looked at each other and smiled. Lois was still oblivious.

At the large, inlaid table in the library, Kent began his questions. The questions began simply enough, but the bronze man began to sense a drive in the questions as Kent went on. "So why are you driven to act as the world's guardian, Mr. Savage?"

"Well," the bronze man relied, "I really didn't have much choice. It's as if I was born into a world where the normal man is either unaccustomed or unprepared to deal with such major threats that are out there. Most times, there are things that I cannot believe but can nonetheless handle. What the world needs is a true Superman."

Pondering this, Kent followed up with his next question. "But you're Doc Savage. You can handle anything. You don't assume any other personality, right?„

"No, I am who I am. A secret identity would be more of a hindrance than a help." Clark Kent thought this over as he took his notes. He wondered, how hard could it really be, after all?

Doc Savage watched Kent as the reporter asked his questions and wrote his notes. Savage sensed another motive but couldn't pinpoint it.

"So, we know who Doc Savage is. We know where he lives and that the entire world is his battlefield. But where do you go when you need some time to unwind?"

"I have a place," the bronze man replied, "a place of solitude, actually more of a fortress, you might say."

Kent thought this over. A fortress of solitude. Wow, what a concept.

One thing that Clark Savage wasn't taught by the army of professors and the tribes of bushmen and medicine men was the science of instinct. This was self-taught and never wrong in such matters. The room was suddenly filled with a low trilling sound. It rang in Kent's ears. It was the first time he had heard such a sound, and, although he could easily trace the source, he said nothing.

For Savage, the veils had been lifted and he suddenly knew the reasons behind young Mr. Kent's questions. He felt that he owed Kent the following speech. The man of bronze, his voice firm, filling the massive room, began to speak to Kent.

"Each of us has a destiny to fulfill. We like to think that we ourselves have little choice in the path that we travel. That there are conditions that are out of our control that make us what we are. Unfortunately, we have all the choice and all the responsibility of our actions and lives. In my case, I was born into a life that was to be dedicated to battling crime in all its manifestations. It is truly a neverending battle. I was given the training, the skills, and have shown the aptitude. Above all

JUGGLING Multiple Titles

Brent Frankenhoff
CBG Associate Editor

Long-time CBG readers may remember Brian Clopper's strip The Crow's Nest from a few years ago. Now Clopper has founded Screaming Dodo Studios to self-publish his black-and-white anthology series, Bombastic.

There are four ongoing stories in the two 24-page issues of Bombastic published to date: "Wingnut and Fidget," "Ruckus,", "Bratterskain," and "Cascade featuring Elo the Eloquent Troll." The first issue also contained a one-page story "On Patrol" and both issues have reprinted two installments each of The Crow's Nest.

While Clopper's art is well-suited to the various story types, the stories are too short. Just as a story gets interesting, it breaks off with the promise of more to come in the next issue, a plan which would be fine if the series were published more often, but not for a series published on a quarterly basis, as Clopper plans to do for the first two years.

Perhaps breaking the series into two separate publications and featuring two longer stories per title (like Marvel's Tales to Astonish did) would help, with each title coming out bimonthly opposite the other, putting Screaming Dodo, in essence, on a monthly release schedule. It would be fun to see more of these characters, especially Elo, Wingnut, and Fidget, more often.

(Bombastic, $2.50, Screaming Dodo Studios)
